WINCHESTER

MODEL 52 RIFLE

History Repeats

It matters little what year you write or talk about as to victories and the Winchester model 52. Each year it adds a new string of triumphs.

Every year since it appeared at Caldwell in 1919, this remarkable shooting arm has demonstrated its superiority in the National Championships with the small bore arm.

At Camp Perry this fall, shooters who used the Winchester Model 52 won four championships and tied for first place in four others of the eleven events.

It was used by eight members of the Dewar team. One of these was Shearer, who, as high man, created a new world's record of 398.

A majority of the members of the Pennsylvania team, short range champions; Ridgeville of Evanston, Ill., inter club champions; and Robertson and McGarity, two-man team champions, also used the Model 52.

J. H. ROBERTSON

R. H. MCGARITY

It was with this rifle, too, that T. J. Imler won the National Individual championship; Ralph McGarity, the Swiss match; and Virgil Richard the short range title.

We wish to extend publicly our congratulations to these shooters, whose likenesses appear in the advertisement, for their meritorious exhibitions, and also to those others who performed so successfully.

Precision ammunition was used in the winning of five championships and in tying for four others and the Winchester 5A telescope sight was used by the majority of winners as well as many other shooters. It was Winchester again — History repeats.

Why They "Posted"

By Carl Elmo Freeman

A FEW years back I began to be troubled with attacks of acute severe abdominal pains. They would come on suddenly and for a time I would be in a horrible condition. During the attacks I was about as companionable as a half-witted poll-parrot.

My wife was the first to notice that these attacks were closely associated with an irritation of the optic nerve. The structure of the eye itself did not seem to be involved. However there undoubtedly was a functional disturbance. Because every time the retina received the reflected light from a "No Hunting" or "Posted," sign, those colicky symptoms would develop, and, in the more aggravated cases I would belly-ache for a week.

As time passed and those signs began to multiply along the road, these painful attacks began to be so severe that I would become violent and destructive. My wife would be put to considerable trouble, and even have to use physical restraint to keep me from climbing the fences and destroying other people's property, especially their "No Hunting" and "Posted," signs.

After an extremely aggravated seizure in which I demolished three of these signs, she threatened to put me in a straitjacket when we contemplated driving on the highway again.

When I found she was really in earnest I decided that something must be done about it. The only thing I could think of was to go to the owners of these signs and earnestly plead with them to remove the things to a point where they would not be exposed to the public gaze.

The first man that I accosted upon the subject was Walter Seagraves who owns considerable land bordering upon the highway. When his signs first appeared they read "Posted," and a few "No Hunting." But as I drove out this time there were a number bearing the words "No Trespassing," "Private, Keep Out." So I opened the conversation by asking him why he had begun to use new wording in his publicity.

"Hell!" he growled. "A lot of the durned automobile trippers thought if they didn't hunt they had a perfect right to come in and camp, and hold picnic and petting parties to their heart's content.

"Here a few years ago when there weren't any automobiles I had no trouble a-tall. Once in a while some folks would come out hunting in the fall but they seemed to have common sense. Then as cars became more popular folks began to come who were only casual acquaintances. They seemed to think that because I was a ranchman my family was laboring under a terribly depressing lonesomeness and that it was their duty to lighten the burden. And if they had forgotten to fill their gas tank it was perfectly all right to back up to my barrel and draw off enough from my pumping supply to correct the error.

"Men with whom I had barely a speaking acquaintance would drive up with their wives and clearly show that they expected us to go into a spasm of delight at the prospect of entertaining their womenfolks while the men were out hunting. They evidently thought that my wife had nothing else to do but cook for them and wash the soiled linen from the beds they occupied, and that when they contributed two or three grubby rabbits to the menu they were materially augmenting our meat supply.

"It actually got to a point where my wife would jump into bed when she saw a car coming and if it brought some friends she would say she had been reading. But if they were some of these pests I would casually remark that she had been exposed to smallpox while on a visit to her sister upstate.

"That worked to perfection for a time. Then there came a couple all equipped for a two days' shoot. We went through the regular routine, and I told my lie. The man took it sitting down but the woman stood up.

"Did I have a nurse? No, not yet. Well, I need look no farther. That woman was a nurse of the first water. She hopped right out and before I knew it, she took possession. My wife was so flabbergasted at being caught in bed with her clothes on, that she actually ran a temperature.

"In spite of all remonstrance that woman undressed my wife, put a hot iron to her feet, cold wet rags on her head, and made her take a big tablespoonful of castor oil!

"Well, sir, that woman kept my wife in bed two days before she decided she had nipped the attack of that horrible disease in the bud. Then she wanted to stay longer for fear my wife would have a relapse, but her husband was a railroader and afraid they'd take his name off the board if he wasted any more time.

"That caused us to change our tactics and we began to show a coolness. We were actually rude in some cases before they quit coming down to the house. Then they began bringing camp outfits and littering up my pastures with empty tin cans, paper plates and other camp offal. It wasn't long before some of my cattle began to come in with tin cans wedged on their feet, and one yearling heifer nearly bled to death where the top cut her fetlock. My old cow would not stand to be milked one night and I found her hide full of shot. And that fall when I found a dun colt shot through the guts, I posted my place.

"As things ran along, that cut off the hunters. But during the summers every Sunday or holiday there would be a party of picnickers decide to picnic under the trees. They thought if they didn't hunt it was all right, and that the more noise they made the better time they had. They never burned or buried their camp refuse, and always built their fires in a new place. I had to clean up their mess, put out the fires they left burning, and fix the fence where they kicked the staples out so the women could get through. So I put up my 'Keep Out' signs, and some of these pests ignore them!"

I did not feel like asking him to remove his signs, but when I drove off I felt that he had contributed a little to bettering my colicky condition. So I thought possibly if I drove out to John Endsley's place I might get another free treatment. John runs cattle and sheep and owns one of the largest ranches in the county. And along the swags I have killed many quail before the "posted" epidemic, and on the thinly wooded hills I could always get a deer.

John was working on a windmill in one of his pastures when I drove up. As windmilling is a job that two can work at, I gave him a hand. When we had renewed the sucker leathers on the piston and replaced the rods in the pipe I broached the subject of signs.

"I see you've posted your place," I said, casually. I tried to use the same tone you would in saying, "I see you built a new chicken coop."

"Yes, by cripes! Had to, in self-defense!"

"Did the hunters shoot at you?"

"No, but one half-witted sap-head barely missed my wife. Ye-ah, she was standing in the back doorway one evening and, 'smack!' went a bullet right into the jamb not four inches from her elbow!"

"That was an accidental discharge——"

"Ye-ah," he drawled, "I reckon. Say, man, listen. If there's any one thing that can deal a ranchman or a farmer misery it's some of these so-called sportsmen. There are lots of real sportsmen. I know dozens of 'em. And it's because of my many sportsman friends that I didn't post my land long ago. Before the roads got so good it was only the real sportsmen that would drive out this far to hunt. But of late years every Tom, Dick and Harry got to coming.

"And they got it into their heads that the minute they acquire a hunting license it empowers them to enter and search every farm and ranch in the State! They have no more idea of property rights than a half-witted grasshopper. Throw down the fence, throw the gate open and leave it open—say, let me tell you what two would-be sports cost me.

"One fall I gathered my calves and threw them in the North pasture to wean them. They were there about four days when along came these two dough-heads, who left the gates open, and my calves scattered all over the country. When we got 'em gathered we turned them back in the pasture only to find that one of those sports had shot a stray bullet through the galvanized steel rim of the water reservoir. That rim is twenty-two feet in diameter, five feet high and set in a saucer-shaped concrete platform. The keyholing bullet had struck glancing and ripped a gash about fourteen inches long and wide enough to lay your hand in, just above the concrete. So all the water was gone and we had to throw those calves back in this pasture with their mothers again. Here they had to stay till I could get a tinner out from town to sweat a patch over that hole and pump a fresh supply of water.

"It cost me right at a hundred dollars to gather the nineteen calves and get that hole patched; and then there was the chance of losing the calves, and the loss of gain their mothers would have made if the milk flow had not been renewed. Some of the older cows did not flesh up and had to be fed that winter.

"Then you take my sheep pasture: it's fenced wolf-proof with forty-inch heavy woven wire netting, one strand of barbed wire two inches under the ground and three strands spaced above the netting. You'd think that a man would have enough brains to go to a post to climb over, but about half of them haven't. They climb over between the posts and sag the netting, then stand on the net and hold the barbed wire up so their dog can get over. When the dog gets through he has to have a game of tag with the sheep. The hunter will yell, holler an' cuss an' throw rocks at the dog till the sheep are frantic and run bleating, bells clattering, and the whole flock churns around for the next hour.

"You know a lot of these shot-gun sports want a big bag and don't care how they get it, just so they can show it in the barber shop an' drug store when they get home and pose as mighty nimrods."

Right at this point I squirmed and was conscious of an uneasy feeling in my breadbasket. I was guilty. My face showed it, but John didn't notice and went right on.

"Here last fall a particularly brainless moron shot at a quail sitting on a bush and blinded a pure-bred ram that cost me $300.

"Another damned fool killed two of my tame turkeys. I guess he thought they were wild because they were fully three hundred yards from the house. I told him when he drove up that I had a bunch of tame quail that I fed with the chickens and would he please stay well out from the corrals. Did he do it? No—witness the two turkeys and seven of those quail. He killed the turkeys just back of the orchard and the quail in the brush growing along the irrigating ditch beyond the garden. I happened to meet him at the gate as he went out on the road. I didn't know what he had done, but he said he'd had a wonderful day and would come back next year!

"Another maniac came out during the turkey season and hunted all day without getting anything. Then he saw three doves sitting on the telephone wire which runs along the top of the fence. He blazed away at those sitting doves with his turkey load and busted the insulator on a post. The phone wire sagged down and grounded on the barbed wire below. That was the day old man Bowman fell off his windmill tower and came near bleeding to death before we could get a doctor out here because the phone wouldn't work.

"There was the nuisance that killed a young mare. She was mouse-colored and he saw her rump sticking out of the shin-oak and thought she was a deer. Did he come down and tell me like a sportsman? Not on your tintype. He beat it for town and it was only by chance that I found out who did it.

"I offered to take fifty dollars for the mare, but he said he could buy all the broom-tails he wanted for twenty. So I sued him and got judgment for a hundred dollars and costs. Then I discovered he had nothing but his car and owed twelve payments on that. Even the rifle he had used belonged to a barber in town.

"The guy that killed a yearling heifer acted differently. He jumped a deer and just as he shot, the heifer stumbled out from behind a bush and fell dead. He stuck her and came right down and told me. We took a pack horse up there, dressed the carcass, packed it down and he insisted upon paying for it. He took the meat to town and sold it to a local butcher and told me afterwards he made two dollars on the deal."

"A real accident," I said.

"Maybe he is, but if there were more accidents like him there would be fewer posted places," growled John.

"How about when your wife was nearly shot?" I asked.

"That was the last straw. We'd been away and when we got back there was a hunter in the backyard. Our little bunch of tame quail was on the roof of the garage watching this strange guy. The roof is 28-gauge corrugated iron and those quail were all lined up on the ridge. Just as we stopped he blazed away, killed two of the quail and filled two sheets of the roofing full of shot holes. So I told him to go away from the house to hunt.

"When he got out a ways, he missed his dog and began whistling and calling. The dog came out of the henhouse lickin' egg off his face. I found out afterwards that the sap-head worked up the side-hill and didn't find anything. Then he saw a hawk in the top of a tree.

"His gun was one of those double-barreled twelve-gauge with a .32-40 rifle barrel below and between. So he thought he'd pick that hawk off with the rifle barrel—that's when he just missed my wife.

"But the good part was, while that idiot was up there his dog picked up a bait of coyote poison and died. When he found his dog was dead and why, here he came chargin' down the hill to the house and demanded that I pay him for his dog! Ye-ah, said it was a pure-bred and especially trained.

"I asked him how he knew his dog was poisoned and he said he had found other bits of poisoned meat and that I needn't try to get out of it because it was on my land! It was along about here I saw the kind of a gun he had and knew he was the mental giant that shot toward the house."

John stopped and scowlingly rolled a cigarette. (Concluded on page 13)

The International Matches at Saint Gall, 1925

By Major J. S. Hatcher

Part I

THE team selected as a result of the Quantico tryouts sailed from New York July 15 on the U. S. Line Steamer "Republic" for Cherbourg. Immediately after going aboard ship we were hustled into line on the top deck, and then we had to face a wicked camera fire. As soon as one camera would click and the gang would start to break away to look for friends on the dock, another camera marksman would yell: "Just a minute—Just a minute, please—same

For this morning practice a row of black pasters was glued to the after deck-house to act as bull's-eyes. All work of this nature on deck resulted in a large gallery, and many of the fair passengers were observed to hold their ears apprehensively whenever we started to aim the guns, and some of them appeared much disappointed because no bullet holes appeared on the bulkhead.

We arrived at Cherbourg at 10 A. M., July 25, and at once started on one of the most Right here I got a thrill that looked a lot like a news item for our readers in dry America. But don't jump to false conclusions. The fact that we got the wine is not the interesting part, for everyone knows that vin blanc or vin rouge forms part of even the simplest meals in France. The interesting item is the fact that every member of the party offered his bottle of wine to some one else, and said: "I'd rather have some water. I'm thirsty." And water it was. The wine sat on the floor of the car, neglected, until the conductor carried it off.

The team arrived in Paris late Saturday afternoon, and as we had to have a business day for attending to baggage, our passage to Switzerland was booked for Tuesday morning. We left the Gare de l'Est at 9 o'clock in the morning on the Basle express, through Chaumont (very familiar to several of us), Belfort, Mulhouse, and Altkirch, of wartime fame, to Petit Croix, the border, where we had more customs inspection, then into Switzerland to Basle.

As we ate supper in the dining car, we got our first glimpse of the Alps, a mass of snow-covered peaks lying away to the south and shining like silver in the setting sun.

Almost as soon as we entered Switzerland, the country became quite hilly, and the whole appearance of the landscape changed. The air seemed clearer and the grass a brighter green. The dark fir-covered hills, with winding rivers at the bottom, formed a charming background for the wonderfully clean and pretty Swiss houses that dotted the sloping fields. As Morgan remarked when he saw some snow-white hogs, "This place is too good to be true. Even the pigs are so clean that it hurts."

The Arrival at "Handgepack"

As we had to change cars at Zurich, I asked the fellows to let me know if they caught the names of any towns we passed, so I would know how long before we had to get our baggage ready. In a few minutes Meeds reported: "Major, we just passed Handgepack." (The word "Handgepack"—meaning hand baggage—is written on every station over the baggage room door.) It took Meeds several days to hear the last of Handgepack.

We left Zurich at 9 P. M. with the not very pleasing prospect of arriving at St. Gall at eleven at night and perhaps having trouble in finding the hotel. Then we had visions of a city crowded with visitors to the matches and perhaps having to look around late at night in a strange city for rooms, though, of course, we had wired ahead for accommodations. Imagine then, our agreeable surprise to be met as we were getting off the train by two gentlemen speaking perfect English, one of whom informed us that he was Mr.

The big range and Schützenhaus at St. Gall. Notice the dwelling just beyond the target butts, showing what confidence the Swiss have in the competitors.

position—a little smile—then you can go." And then another "click." Finally, when all the single fire artists were through, they let us get just about ten feet away before the gatling gun division turned loose with their movie cameras and made us line up all over again. They let us get started just to raise our hopes and also to get some action in the picture.

To Cherbourg, via Queenstown and Plymouth, is a ten-day trip, but the time went in a hurry. In the first place, we had a new kit of tools, and the sights and set triggers all came in for a badly needed overhauling, and when a bunch of gun cranks get immersed in the task of fitting themselves up with the best of sights and the snappiest of triggers, with plenty of spares to choose from and change to, time flies unheeded.

Every morning the gang assembled on the after deck for aiming practice. With the big matches only two weeks ahead, it would never do to let ten days of idleness soften up muscles that will be badly needed in holding the heavy free rifles.

difficult and important tasks on the trip, that of getting the guns and ammunition through the customs and on their way. The reader can better appreciate what we were up against at this point by realizing that France is now at war in Morocco, and that even in times of profoundest peace, the mere hint of munitions in your baggage will make the average continental custom's official tear his hair and send for the nearest gendarme.

Even when the customs are through with you, it is not all plain sailing for the railroad regulations in France require that cartridges must be shipped in a separate car with an empty box car ahead of it and another one behind it, to separate it from the rest of the train.

At last, the baggage difficulties having been satisfactorily overcome, we got on the train for Paris and settled ourselves for lunch. But there had been a wreck on the line, and there was no dining car on the train, so that box lunches were furnished for each person. Every box contained some sandwiches, hard boiled eggs, etc., and a bottle of wine.

Boy, page Mr. Volstead!

Mader, proprietor of Hotel Walhalla, and that our rooms were ready before us. The other member of the group turned out to be Mr. Hugo Neuburger, who needs no introduction to the American shooting fraternity. Mr. Neuburger is a life member of the National Rifle Association, and for thirty years has been a member of the New Jersey State Rifle Association. Every year, for the past ten or fifteen years, Mr. Neuburger has given a prize at Sea Girt, and it so happened that when Mr. Neuburger met us, Sergt. Iorger was looking at the time by a watch donated by Mr. Neuburger and won by Sergt. Iorger.

The next morning after our arrival, Mr. Neuburger was at the hotel bright and early, and took us on a personally conducted tour of the town, showing us the banks, Post Office, Telegraph Office, etc. During this tour, we noticed a very large American flag flying from Hotel Walhalla in our honor.

Our tour of St. Gall ended at the Schützenhaus and rifle range, where the matches are to be held. The range is situated in the hills just outside the town in a beautiful location, and the trip out to the range was a real pleasure.

The clubhouse is located on the edge of the road, and is a fine substantial structure that might be taken for a town hall or post office. It is on the edge of a small valley, and right across on the slope of the opposite hill are the targets, seventy-two in number.

There is a backstop for the bullets, just as large as the targets themselves, as they evidently figure that with accurate shooting, no very large butts are needed. One of the

A very important feature of the range is the fact that the targets are about eighteen meters higher than the firing point, which amounts to a six per cent elevation. This shooting uphill calls for quite a different stance and a different adjustment of the hand rest from what is required for shooting on the level, and it may cause us trouble.

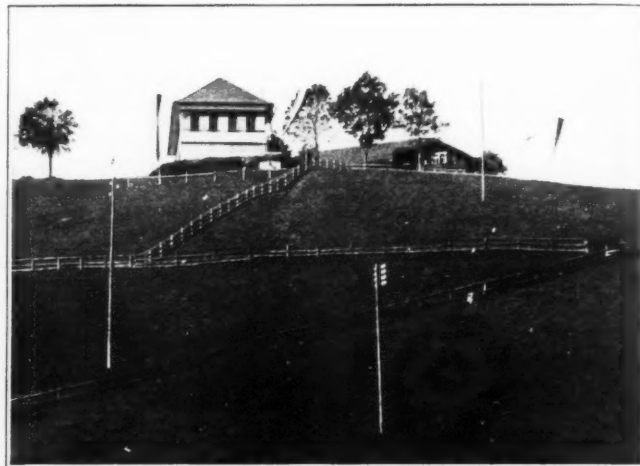

After we were shown the big range, we were informed that two ranges near the city had been set aside for our exclusive for practice. Right there one big trouble vanished, for we had suffered from visions of having no place at all to practice, and at very best of having a lot of trouble getting a place.

The next thing on the program was to start out and look at the ranges to see which was better.

A Daily Dozen—Swiss Style

At this point we started on what appeared to be an innocent little walk, but what turned out to be almost an ascent of Pike's Peak. Up the hills we tramped, very much pleased at being told that it was only a couple of thousand meters farther on! About that time the charm of mountain scenery was beginning to pall a little.

The range and shooting house at Vogelsegg where the American team had an entire range furnished for their exclusive practice.

At last, however, we reached the range, and found a wonderful shooting house and very nice targets, but there was one disadvantage and that was the fact that this time the range sloped distinctly downhill. It didn't seem at all a good plan to practice on a downhill range, and then have the matches on an uphill one, and our guides, Mr. Neuburger and Mr. Widmer, recognized the truth of this and arranged for us to see the other range that they had reserved.

As it was now lunch-time, we headed for a nearby restaurant, on the summit of the Freudenberg mountain, overlooking St. Gall. As we came out on top of the hill, every one gave a gasp of surprise at the wonderful view which was suddenly disclosed. Directly in front of us lay the blue expanse of the Boden See (Lake Constance), looking from this height like a small pond at our feet. On this side of the lake lay St. Gall, Rorschach and Constance, and over on the other side, in Germany, lay Friedrichshafen, famous as the home of the Zeppelin airships.

To the right could be seen several high Austrian mountain ranges, while behind us towered Mount Santis, of Alpine proportion.

The lunch up there, good beer (percentage not questioned), real Swiss cheese, and wonderful scenery, was a treat after our hard exercise of the forenoon.

Fortunately, our other choice for a practice range was reached by an electric railway. It was located at a small mountain village called Vogelsegg, which I am told means something like "Bird's-eye view." The name is well justified, for the range is high up on the side of a mountain overlooking the beautiful Boden See.

The pretty and substantial clubhouse of the Vogelsegg range is located on one spur of the mountain, and the targets on another, with a deep grassy valley between and a dark fir forest as background. (Concluded on page 15) most striking features of the range is the fact that a large and substantial residence occupies the hillside some fifty yards beyond the targets. Some confidence these Swiss have in their marksmen! And with very good reason, too.

For the big matches, a large mess and entertainment hall has been built.

first, and quite interested in the beautiful scenery. After a while most members of the party thought the day was a trifle warm. Then up a few more hills, and some steps began to lag. Mr. C. Widmer, the celebrated gunsmith and rifle-shot accompanied us on this tour. Finally, when every one was about completely done in, we were cheered up (?) by

The Howe-Whelen Sight

By William J.
Rader

SO much interest has been expressed, and so many questions asked, regarding the Bolt Sleeve Aperture Sight for Springfield rifles, known commercially as the Howe-Whelen, that a bit of information from a garden variety of shooter who fell for it may prove acceptable.

When the first ad. describing this sight appeared in the February 1, 1925, issue of the AMERICAN RIFLEMAN, the alleged head of my household jumped several feet into the air, cracked his heels together and yelled jubilantly, "There's the sight I've been wanting for ten years!" Whereupon the real head of the house turned to face me with a cold, steely glitter in her violet eyes, and remarked quietly, but oh! so firmly, "And if it's anything to do with a gun you can keep right on wanting it for the next ten years!"

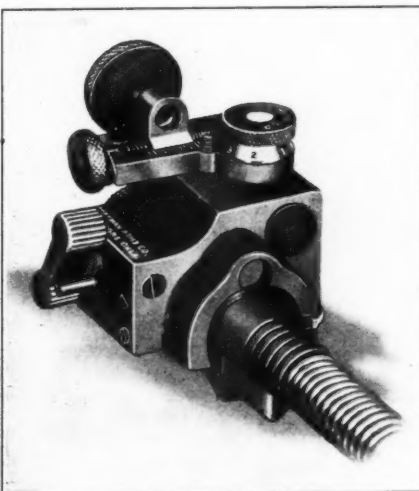

But as love laughs at locksmiths, so gun-love, while appearing to bow to the conjugal ultimatum, eventually manages to sneak the new piece of equipment in through the basement entrance, its presence to be accounted for at some future date when conditions seem more propitious.

There were a lot of things I wanted to know about this new sight, which weren't covered in the advertisement; and a letter to the makers brought little additional information except the price—which took my breath for the time being. But there's no stopping a gun crank when he reaches the stage of mania to which I have attained. Argued I, "This sight is made by a reliable firm, and bears the name of the world's foremost rifle authority—it must, therefore, be worth the money. And what if it does cost twice as much as a Lyman 48—it costs but half as much as a good 'scope. Now my Springfield needs a sight; it must have a sight; I'm liable to need a good rear sight any minute, in case some one should suddenly make me a present of a trip to Northern Michigan, or even Alaska. And who knows but somebody might find a way to get our local rifle club into action and get a range to shoot on—that might happen any day. Now, seeing I can't afford a 'scope, and don't particularly care for 'em anyhow, seems to me it would be a real economy to buy this Howe-Whelen sight."

So, having been unable to secure the desired additional information by correspondence or otherwise, I concluded there was but one way to get it; and after raking up all the available cash and borrowing what I could from friends I held my breath, said "Here goes nothin'"—and shot the bankroll!

In less than a week it arrived, in a little red box wrapped up in a circular telling how easy it was to put it on the rifle. The instructions sounded so simple that I could hardly wait to see it on my Springfield, but I controlled my emotions as well as possible until after dinner. Some folks consider it a task to dismount a Springfield bolt and reassemble it, but it's really no trick at all unless the mainspring gets unruly and sends the striker sailing into the middle of next week.

"To mount, just remove old sleeve from bolt, place striker, etc., through the sight-base sleeve, and screw the assembly into the bolt." That's what the ad. said, and that's what I did—only I thought I wouldn't throw the old sleeve away—just in case, you know. But she went together without a hitch. Then, pressing down the magazine follower, I proceeded to close the bolt. Almost I did. It lacked about a quarter of an inch of going far enough forward, to the point where the handle would turn down, and neither force nor persuasion would budge it. At times like this I usually get panicky, and wonder if I've gone and busted something, or if I have had my usual luck of getting the one bad one out of the lot.

But a little investigation after I had cooled down showed that the trouble was small, and easily remedied. The little spring latch on the left side of sight sleeve, which engages a notch in rear end of bolt when action is open, would not release when it entered the receiver—as it should have done. Comparison of this latch with the one on the old sleeve showed that all it needed was to have the point shaped up a bit to fit the notch on my particular bolt—which was easily done in a couple of minutes with a small slip-hone. Then she worked like a charm.

This, of course, is no fault of the sight. The factory had made the latch true to dimensions and form, and the variation was in the bolt itself. This bit of stoning on the latch was absolutely all the "gunsmithing" required to install the best sight I have ever seen!

In sighting principle and adjustment, the Howe-Whelen sight is, of course, identical with the Lyman 48. The windage and elevation divisions are the same, and the screws have the same number of clicks. The disk, which is removable, is identical with the Lyman, and the large aperture when disk is removed is also the same. The elevation slide may be fully withdrawn in the same way, by loosening the lock nut and pushing it forward. After this, the similarity ceases.

I have heard of the screws which hold the Lyman 48 onto the receiver occasionally breaking off or working out and letting the sight drop off. I don't see how you could lose a Howe-Whelen sight, however, unless you lost the bolt, or possibly the entire rifle. It entirely replaces the old sleeve, and forms a working part of the rifle. The aperture is brought back even with the head of striker when not cocked. When bolt is closed the sight is stationary, and does not fly forward when gun is fired, as do sights mounted on the cocking piece. It is, in my opinion, mounted in the best possible position—as close to the eye as is practicable, especially for prone shooting, and not close enough to endanger the eye from recoil.

At first glance it would appear that the sight might be wobbly when mounted, and hence inaccurate to a degree, because it replaces the bolt sleeve, which is quite wobbly. All play and looseness has been eliminated, however, in a very certain manner. On the right side of sight, underneath, is a hardened steel pin projecting (Concluded on page 15)

A Day at Perry

By J. E. Wertman

I WAS at Camp Perry on the afternoon of September 10 and forenoon of September 11. My short stay was very interesting and enjoyable.

On arriving, I located the headquarters of the National Rifle Association, and presented my card, showing I am a life member of the association. I informed the courteous young gentleman that I intended to stay for the Annual Meeting, and asked if it was convenient to secure quarters for the night. He said I might secure accommodations at the Club House, and if I desired, he would call them up; which he did, ascertaining there were no rooms available, but they could accommodate us with a tent. This was fine. Then he gave them our names. There were two of us. I was accompanied by Mr. C. H. Burgis, also a life member of the N. R. A., and we immediately went to the Club House.

There we were assigned to house tent G-3, containing two cots, two mats, two pillows, one table, two chairs (one broken), two buckets, one basin, one bulb, six blankets, four sheets and two pillow slips.

After looking around, I decided to get a pail of water, but could not locate a path to the well. I asked a lady in the next tent where the pump was. She pleasantly directed me to the pipes on the side of a shed and, upon thumbing the valve I filled the pail, and returned to the tent.

I filled the basin to remove the dust of travel. Holy Gee! No soap, no towel. Oh! well, it was not the first time. Plain water, with a handkerchief serving as a towel. Got out my brush and comb. No mirror, so had my partner do the barber act.

Then, we went to the ranges, wandering along the firing lines. First the pistol targets; lots of noise, but did not note any exceptional scores, and so on down the line.

Finally landed at Commercial Row. First, however, looked over the stock of P. J. O'Hare, with his many shooting accessories and knickknacks all jumbled together, with an always ready smile. Well, it was quite a curio shop.

Then wandered into the Western Cartridge Company display and asked the attendant if it were safe to shoot the regular Super-X shell in a Fox—6¾ pound gun. He answered, asking why I was using a 6¾ pound gun. I told him I weighed 225 pounds and a little recoil probably did not bother me as much as it did some of these athletic young men. He informed me he weighed 180 pounds and shot a 9 pound gun; that in getting a 6¾ pound 12-gauge, I only stretched the barrels of a 20-gauge and that I should caution the Fox Gun Company to test the gun for the Super-X shell, as the barrels might have a flaw, etc. This was a new one to me. I always supposed all reliable manufacturers tested the barrels of their guns with heavier charges than the regular charge for which the gun was chambered, and made doubly sure there was no flaw or excessive strain. So, I will try regular Super-X shells in a 6¾ pound Fox when I get it.

Before leaving Cleveland, I stopped at a dealer's and ordered a Winchester Model 54 which was advertised as being tapped for scope blocks. Found the receiver tapped on top and side. The clerk informed me that the side taps were for both the Lyman Sight and rear scope block. When the scope was used, you unscrewed the Lyman; and when you used the Lyman, you unscrewed the block. So, I dropped into the Winchester shop and was informed that it was necessary to tap the barrel for the forward block. The receiver was tapped at the factory before it was case-hardened; otherwise, it might be difficult to do it. On my return I told my dealer. We are all happy now.

Then to the S. & W. shop. I had with me my .38 S. & W. special target gun. On examining the big broad patridge sights, I was sure I would win some prize money and gold medals if my gun were equipped with them, but their stock of patridges was exhausted. Well, I got no prize money or medals. By golly, I have a good alibi.

Then, to Belding & Mull and asked all the questions imaginable about scopes, mounts and tools. Mr. Ness, the courteous gentleman in charge, was very patient in answering and enlightening me.

By this time, the ranges were closed. It was warm, yes, hot, and as we were passing a U.S.A. machine in which were two persons, one of them said, "If you have any distance to go, we will take you." We thanked him and said that our car was just around the corner. I wondered who this high officer was who offered his aid to two old fellows.

In the evening, at the meeting, I recognized our willing Samaritan as Col. A. J. Macnab. This is again evidence that when you meet an Army Officer, you meet a real gentleman.

Some one told me Chauncey Thomas was at the Camp. I said I wanted to see him, and asked what he looks like. I was informed I would know him when I saw him. I looked for one who would have S. A. .45 sixguns strung all around him. I wanted to see this man who hunts grizzly bear with .45 sixguns, and who has toted .45 Cannons for 39 years and I hope, never shot a man. Now, I am not sure I saw him. However, I guess I got a passing glimpse.

It was near the adjournment of the evening meeting, quite a large middle-aged man passed out through the door. I noticed he wore about a 3-inch embossed belt, carried a wide brimmed hat, crushed to a peak, the front indented a little more pronounced than the rear. Our Whelens, Hoffmans and other experts concluded that our commercial guns were hardly adequate for grizzlies, so they are building .300 Magnum and .35 Whelens. Chauncey gets them with a sixgun—I mean—goes after them, but possibly doesn't get what he goes after. Hence a poor salesman.

The next day we wandered again to the Pistol Range where the Police Teams were at work—mind you, work, not play—and some good scores were made. They were a fine body of upstanding men and I am sure capable and vigilant officers and a credit to their home cities.

Watched the 1000-yard boys at work. Scores good, fair and bad, were made, as usual where so many shooters are competing.

Then to the Running Deer where we met the genial good-natured General Critchfield. Had a good chat with the General. But that deer, he floats out from a brush-heap, goes gliding across a possible 100-foot space as smooth and silent as a phantom shadow, and gets behind another pile of brush.

He is a big deer and when he started, I wondered why they didn't shoot. It was painful. Then crash! and he was behind the brush A-4 at 3:00 o'clock.

By golly, I never saw a deer act like that. They should paint him dark gray, pile a lot of brush here and there through which he passes, then let him start with a jump and land twenty feet; then another rebound of twenty more and a few more shorter ones to cover. I wonder how many 5-4-3-2-1-0 would be scored. Guess darn few with the awkward Springfield as a deer-hunting rifle.

But the deer acted very lady-like. Oh! well, it was fun anyway and beats playing golf.

Then, I did not overlook the pistol targets for preliminary practice. It was a continual pop, pop and commands "Cease firing"; "Score"; "Forward march."

A lady was being coached by a kindly looking gentleman. She was using a .22 S. & W. pistol. I did not learn how she was scoring, but her poise was without criticism, her movements were graceful, and in my enthusiasm, I named her "Miss America."

I especially noticed the absence of visitors. All seemed to be participants, except the two old men whom General Macnab offered a lift.

We went to the Club House, checked out the property, including the broken chair and a pailful of waste water and were presented with an invoiced bill of $5.05 for twenty-three hours use of a furnished house, one broken chair, and six good substantial meals, including pie or tapioca pudding.

By George! it was a fine outing and I am going to practise up with my .38 Special and .45 Automatic, and next year I hope to get some of that prize money and gold medals. Notice the plural.

The Matches at Perry

By Chauncey Thomas

A GAIN I am writing for the outsider. The men who were there, they who squeezed the magic triggers, know what was done better than any one can tell it; so this article is merely a finger talk to the man many miles from Perry who wants to know what was done there, and how it was done, rather than who did it, simply because of all the men in the United States he, himself, wishes that he were the man. Maybe he will be sometime, at least such is the hidden hope of each of many thousand readers—so I write to him.

Generally speaking, the matches can be divided into three kinds—the School that runs for about a week before the official matches begin, then a mixture of minor and try-out matches, then the big matches at the end of the shoot. The School of Instruction is to train, as much as possible, any one who wants to learn how to shoot, and if he can, to train him to win the highest prizes at Perry. The minor and mixed matches that are run off during the first two weeks at Perry automatically weed out all but the best shots, and at the end these survivors lay them down to pray and to shoot for the last big prizes.

This is right and proper. It is sanely arranged that if a man cannot or does not show considerable skill during the first two weeks' shooting, then he should not clog up the last few big shoots, for there are a great many more shooters than there are targets and the skilled markers to mark them.

Now space is very limited in this magazine, so these cramped lines about the matches can only touch hurriedly the highest and brightest points of the last biggest matches. Not that the man with the lowest score of the whole Camp is deliberately forgotten or ignored, but to mention all who try is simply to publish a small city directory, that, because of its crowd of names, would defeat its own object. Hence the sort-out here, when the fact is that the man with the lowest score in camp is really worthy of the highest praise of them all, for he works under the hardest and most discouraging conditions where the experts of long training and experience who get the big cups find their shooting a keen pleasure, suitable reward in itself, regardless of any cup or medal. The beginner is not ignored at Perry, nor in this magazine, but remember that he numbers hundreds, also that space is limited. Some day, if he keeps religiously at it, just as the present big winners did when they began several years ago, his name will rise like the morning sun and be reflected from the big silver cups.

The four big matches at Perry are the Herrick, the President's, and the National Team, and the National Individual. The Palma match is not a match in itself, but is decided by adding up the totals of a number of matches at Perry. It is my first—but I hope not last—trip to Camp Perry, remember, and I did not fire a shot, except a few private pops one day to test a balky trigger pull on a Colt "45," of course.

At this writing, the National Individual and the National Team matches are not yet shot. Today (Monday, September 14) the Herrick was shot. Various matches are named, by the way, either for the object of shooting them, like the National Team match, or for the man who put up the permanent trophy. And these big trophies are turned over to the winners, remember, as such individual possession for one year. The winners have the keen pleasure of having the actual cups themselves put into their hands before the whole camp as winners for the winning year. All medals, of course, go to the actual winners of them, to become their personal property. But it is different with some fine trophy that cost several thousand dollars, and that because of associations is priceless in the shooting world, somewhat as the famous "America Cup" is in the international yacht races. No individual ever owns it permanently.

I am a rank outsider, remember, just like the youngest and rawest shot who reads these lines. And right here, therefore, I am calmly and deliberately going to state that the cups, the medals, the scores do not always show which are the best shots. Hold on—the reason is the weather, telegrams from home, sickness, or just feeling bad because of unwise mixing of milk and near-beer, a lot of unavoidable reasons. Take one example: Yesterday, one of the best teams from the Rockies was knocked out of all hope of winning any of the last big matches because the acknowledged best shot on the team received a telegram that his mother was dangerously ill, then a second wire that she was dead. He left for home.

No one can control the wind, and it is unavoidable that one man, or one team, is unlucky enough to be caught in a sudden breeze from the lake, perhaps the only hour the wind is bad that day. Also the morning and the evening lights are better for close hits, and he who draws a card that tells him he must shoot just before or just after noon, is also a bit unlucky. These two illustrations must be enough here. Any one can easily figure out many others that can, and actually do, inject the element of luck into all the matches.

Chess is purely a game of skill, roulette is purely a game of chance, poker is a game of skill plus chance. And any big shooting match, between 2,000-odd shooters, and lasting about three weeks, is therefore just like poker, skill plus luck. Therefore, as I remarked just before the lynching, all these Camp Perry matches are skill plus luck, just like poker or farming. It mostly depends on the weather, then on a whole lot of other things in no way connected or even connectable with shooting, or with anything else, for that matter. When the lake gets out of its hole and invades the camp a shoot turns into a paddling match.

One thing is sure, no poor shot or any poor team can win, or even get in sight of a winning place; but it is just as true that some of the best men and best teams have been shunted far down the list by sheer hard luck, as illustrated above. Better luck next time, and no one to blame. The statistical office, the very heart of the Camp Perry shoots, is as painstaking and as dead square as it is possible for human affairs to be, but even that mathematical outfit cannot assign each man evenly to each kind of light, wind and circumstances. That is impossible.

Colonel Macnab, the commanding officer of the whole camp, watches over everything from the taste of the mashed potatoes to the kicking out of bootleggers, not from official heaven but from right on the spot himself; and he is a four-square level-headed man not afraid to help tack up 22 targets, or to prowl with a dangerous eye through the camp kitchens to see if the forks are washed clean. But even that sane man cannot head off Lady Luck from playing tricks on Jimmy Jones, such as a nice big fat raindrop right in the eye just as the trigger lets go on a string of "V's," and a tearful goose-egg crowns the wrecked possible.

Jimmy Jones has his troubles—and the commanding officer has his troubles, too. If such a grand institution as a Colonel of the Regulars cannot make possibles every day at Camp Perry—and no man can—then Jimmy Jones can't either. When Lady Luck is not troubling Jimmy she is be-deviling the Colonel. And except these two, no personal names will be mentioned in any of my articles, or they too would be nothing but a deformed city directory. The point is that James may be the best shot in camp except for that raindrop in the eye, and all he got was the Cup of Sorrow slopping over with woe and cloud water.

Earnest? I haven't seen a man in Camp in two weeks cut a caper. They go trooping by my window like soldiers to battle. No collection of bookworms at a preacher factory has a more serious and studious way. They are studying something. To illustrate—

'Tis one of those stories that, if not true, it should be. All the others of the team had registered bull's-eyes. The match was won, except that one of them, the best shot of them all, had pulled a "3" when every evidence, such as any one would hang a man on, insured a "V" bull's-eye, a regular pin-center hit. The criminal sat on his cot muttering—"How did I get that three?" They refrained from proper murder, his robbed teammates, and perfunctorily offered reasons against suicide. Into the tent stepped a messenger with a telegram. The mourner opened it, leaped to his feet—"Gentlemen, my wife as just been killed in an auto accident." Stunned, those in the tent were silent. Then with a wrung look in his eyes he murmured—"How did I get that three?"

That story is like Mark Twain's death, greatly exaggerated, but this one I know to be true. I thought to write a separate story around it, entitled "The Spirit of Perry," but it will do here. One of the best shots in camp, a widely-known rifleman of high standing was punching out not only a straight line of bull's-eyes, but incidentally a straight line of "V's" within those bulls. He was on the royal road to first place, going strong. Then his rifle, just as he settled into his sling, exploded accidentally, but odd as it may be, by sheer accident that shot, too, registered another "V." "Mister So-and-so, fifth shot for record, a 'V,'" announced methodically the crisp young marine at the blackboard.

"Make that a zero, please," requested the shooter. "The gun went off by accident, and I want nothing I have not shot."

The marine insisted he had no authority to change a score, no more down than up, and called the range officer. This range officer listened quietly. "Mark it a miss," he ordered, and looked down at the prone shooter with the respect with which one clean man regards another, though they come from the ends of the earth. The shooter had to have 95 x 100 possible to make entry to one of the big matches. He went at it again, and ran up some more "V's," when again the gun went off accidentally. His score, a clean miss this time, was now ninety, and that ended it. He was out of the match, but he kept on shooting. Something had gone wrong with the sear, probably, but all the rest of his string were "V's" and bulls. He had deliberately thrown aside his chance to win one of the big cups simply because "I didn't shoot that shot," as he protested to the marine, "and I'll accept no rating that I have not earned." That, gentlemen, is clean shooting and a clean square man. It is the Spirit of Perry.

Incidentally, in all the thousands of shots fired and registered in Perry during these matches I have not seen, or heard of, one case of cheating, or of shady marking, of any kind. The only man who did not get what he fired was the Gentleman who refused to accept a "V" that might have given him later one of the famous cups for a year, because he had not intentionally fired the shot.

Now to get down to figures. The Individual Palma match, as I said, is a sort of summing up of the totals of three matches, fired under separate names, 800 and 900 and 1,000 yards, respectively. The 1,000 yards phase of the Palma is called the Crowell match, after the cup donor for that particular shoot. Serg. William F. Pulver of the Marines won it with a possible of 15 straight bull's-eyes, and 12 x 15 of those bulls were "V's." The bull's-eye was 36 inches, and the "V" ring inside it was 20 inches. Good shooting. He shot the ordinary match Springfield service rifle, as issued. In fact, the whole Palma series, and final Palma match, therefore, requires the service rifle.

The final largest total in the Palma series was put up by a sailor, a first-class sailorman, one Wilmer L. Witt, with an almost unbelievable score of 224 x 225, which means that all his shots at 800 and 900 and 1,000 yards except one just outside the black due to an unexpected wind puff, were bull's-eyes. And he had to fight for it, too, for the Marines were right on his tail. A week before, in a tryout shoot of six Marines over the same course, 3 x 6 Marines fired scores each higher than the 1924 winning score, and one of them twice equaled Witt's score. But those tryouts were not for official final registering. The Marines were just enjoying some horizontal engineering, having nothing else to occupy their restless minds and thoroughbred muscles. I foresee considerable between the Sailors and the Marines aboard ship this winter.

The Leach match, cupless, was won by Second Lieut. Pierson E. Conrad, when he poked 7 bulls out of 7 shots, each 7 at 800 and 900 and 1,000 yards, total score for the 21 shots, 105. This was the first match where our Cuban friends, they who gave Scribe Crossman the jumping jerks in Peru last year, came straight to the front with a score just like Conrad's, a 105 possible by Lieut. Ambrosio D. Galmo of the Cuban army. The Senor was a tyro, and lost out only because Conrad had one more "V" than he had.

Some of the navy men are not startling on quick-pull with a frontier "6-gun," I discovered to my sorrow over the safety of our shores, but they sure are popcorn on a hot stove with a Springfield rifle. Gunner's Mate, First Class, Frank M. Criswell, won the 200-400 yards rapid fire match against all comers at Perry, and that means over 2,000 of the best riflemen in America. If it were not for sundry Cuban and Canadian figures I would say "in the world." But when certain nerveless men to the north and to the south of these States snuggle into a rifle sling as if it were a feather-bed Christmas night, one must be careful of one's statements. "In the United States," therefore.

The visitors from both fellow-American countries made a fine impression at Perry, both as riflemen and as men. We liked them, feared their bullet holes, and shot our best. If we got it we had to earn it. Those men just plumb spoil a poor little bull's-eye almost any time they take the notion.

The matches mentioned so far are all for the U. S. regulars of land and sea; for their backers in time of need, as in 1917 for instance; for the National Guard; and, behind the Guard, for the civilian rifle shot; and are open to all four kinds of shots just listed. But the N. R. A., otherwise known at length as the National Rifle Association for the benefit and more than hinting information of those benighted ones who have not yet joined it, the N. R. A.—"$2, please. Thanks"—has to go and have a rifle shoot all by itself, called

The Members' Match. Until you join you can't shoot, of course. To say nothing of about half price on bullets, primers, and other murderous duff for a year, via said N. R. A. However, their own particular match was calmly pocketed and packed off home by one Joseph Yersak, a Corporal of Troop A of the 13th U. S. Cavalry. That "13" didn't work that time, as several envious greenish-eyed possible owners had wished it would, for he not only ran a straight string of bull's-eyes, but proceeded to rub it in nice and deep by piling up 16 of them, all "V's" except 2 "5's." And camping on his trail, shot for shot, was a tyro, John R. Brooke, Jr., of the Infantry, also Ass't Director of Civilian Marksmanship, one of the men who shovel out 9-degree boat-tails when his fellow N. R. A. members mail in P. O. orders. He, too, had 16 bulls, but was duly ruined by 3 "5's." That is, he had just one less "V" than Yersak. And there were 17—yes, seventeen—men in this match, all with black possible on the 20-inch bull with its 12-inch "V" ring, at 600 yards, and every one limited to service military rifles, as issued. Some more good shooting.

The two things that struck me as the most noticeable items in all these matches were that the "mile-high men"—as we Westerners from the Rockies call each other, much to tender-footed puzzlement and amusement—we altitude men cannot guess the sea-level windage and almost always got it wrong, hence the men from the high hills will probably never win very much at a seashore elevation. The other thing was that the service Springfield rifle, just as issued, iron sights and all, held its own to within a few per cent of the longest heaviest pressure barrel double-set trigger rifles with the finest of telescopes on them, from 5 up to 12 and even 18 power. The service rifle cannot shoot shot for shot with the big special target and scoped pressure Springfields, that is evident, but the difference between the two guns is much less than one would think until he has watched hundreds of the service rifles shot side by side with the target pets at all ranges from 200 yards to 1,000 yards.

Private Percy W. Eberhardt of the Marines—those V-hungry Marines, trim as greyhounds—a tyro please note carefully, won the rapid fire at 400 yards. This is a new match, shot for the first time this year. Only one possible, and he got it. Service rifle. Right behind him came two more tyros for second and third place, and out of the highest 10 men, 5 were tyros. Bull was 16 inches, no "V" ring. So forget the thought that only 3 men of many matches can win at Perry. Here is one of the most difficult matches of the whole meet not only won by a beginner against all kinds of crack shots, and to prove that it is not just luck, half of the 10 best men were beginners, not necessarily in rifle shooting, of course, but in the keenest official matches being shot in the world today.

Tyros seem to love popping them out, for Gunner's Mate, First Class, Frank M. Criswell of the Navy, another tyro, roped in the first place in the combined 200-400 yards rapid fire affair, also against all comers, and with the service rifle.

At this writing data of the other biggest matches are not yet available, so kindly run over the official tables that will be hooked onto this running story later by the editor, now safe in Washington, who left me behind in camp to do all the work. He will lather a few columns of names and figures with the paste brush, and shoot (Concluded on page 14)

Reviewing the Row

By a "First Nighter"

THIS article is UNIQUE, though not of the Hercules brand. It is certainly going to be novel, with its one pretense—difference. We believe practically all come to Perry with a private cleaver to hone. Our own axe-grinding was to soak up all the atmosphere we could during the National Matches—and we could, with the open-plumbing of these wire-ventilated mess halls on Commercial Row. In fact, we've absorbed enough of the Camp to ship out six newspaper articles without as much as mentioning the sensational fire on the firing line. So, folks, don't expect any of the usual dry-rot about the shooting. This is inside stuff (none of these wise guys have pulled any lamb's hair over our lights)! All right, advance Hector—the weeping willow is laughing!

We have either heard it written or seen it said that Camp Perry is "Sea Girt with a Commercial Row appendage." In other words, that Commercial Row makes Perry. If it means that literally, it is bad, all to the bad; but if, as we think, it means this row of eighteen commercially-occupied mess-halls is the chief distinguishing characteristic of Camp Perry, it is all exactly as Allah wills. Perry is the focal point of the shooting fraternity's interests, and Commercial Row is the Melting Pot of the Camp. "Riflenut" means that species which has evolved from an exalted environment of minute details. We are all too busy selling enough stock to pay for what advertising we are getting out of C. R. to go out and assimilate the vernacular on the Range, but we cannot escape the gamut of ideas and prejudices discussed in the booth by congregated groups of shooters within sight of our ear.

The D. C. M., Western, and Belding & Mull, were among the first to arrive on the Bow'ry, and the U. S. R. A., Colt, and the Am. Rifleman among the last. But, as we were charter members of the 1925 C. R. Congress, we got in on this first-flush of impressions. It appears that the "Government is tight" this year, because they "give us 'tin-cans' instid of copper 'Boats'" for practice, and handed out exactly twelve cartridges at the firing line instead of issuing half-a-dozen bandoliers of Match stuff to take home. Though that there "1921 Air-craft junk" surprised 'em with its accuracy at 600 yards, some of them got out their microscopes and discovered metallic fouling with the result that Paddy O'Hare sold ten thousand bottles of No. 9, and B. & M. were kept busy pulling extra brass brushes off their auxiliary stock of cleaning rods to meet the strenuous situation. Peculiar, but honest.

Another very popular growl, which we are inclined to believe was merely a rifleman's alibi, was about squadding, as follows: "Hell, I drew the same doggone hours again! They

"FOR OFFICERS ONLY" signs on 'em until the poor uninformed civilian runs from one to the other until he is quite embarrassed for natural reasons. They place the same kind of a roof on the similarly white great mess hall and call it the "Garbage Can," where you serve yourself right and watch helplessly while the girl with the nippers punches L out of your meal ticket. When this monotony bored us, we took C. T. in arm and strolled toward the beach to the Green Shack, where an excellent plate dinner could be had. Unfortunately an armed guard stopped us at the door and declared the place "out of bounds" for apparently excellent reasons. However, this practically forced us into the next stand, Dew Drop Inn, where a small piece of meat and "an a la mode" were mutually consumed. Our dollar bill was interrupted by C. T.'s, "Hold on there, this is a 'Dutch Treat,'" but his eyes popped slightly when the waiter took his own as well and handed back a measly nickel.

On the whole we feed well, and our comfort is treated with consideration. The camp is kept spick and span, and routine matters operate so evenly they are not noticed. This smoothness speaks sufficiently of Col. Macnab's ability—as the Camp Commander he is an expert pistol shot, because he won the Individual Pistol Championship Match the other night at Hoffman's booth with a Webley Air Pistol in fair competition. The sides of the pyramid tents are tied down, the Squaw Tents have board walls, and here, on C. R., we have big range-stoves and plenty of fuel for our comfort during this siege of "Magnolia Manor" weather.

W. A. Morrall chooses the last building in Com. Row because it is nearest the United States Revolver Association's range, and he is playing a lone hand with the U. S. R. A. technique. He ponderously sits and tries to decide whether to adopt N.R.A. tactics and expand or to retain old methods and remain invulnerable. Two doors above houses the Ordnance Dept. workshop, where Woodward pulls "creep" from poor triggers and increases a sour 6-pound pull into a sweet three plus—when he is not out swinging his legs from the Running-Deer bus, which is often.

The "Row" at Perry

give all the best shots the best light. 'Course, Lister didn't know it was going to rain at 10:30 but he knew dang well the sun would set at six o'clock. If the days hain't long enough, Y-in-ell don't they postpone the last relays 'till daybreak?"

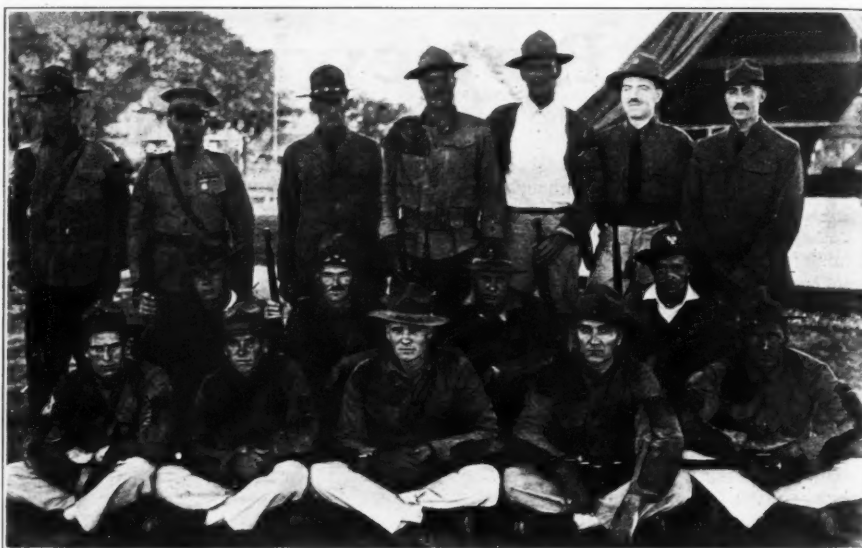

One more came from the "Big-boys with the small-bores," whom, Noah says, are the nuttiest of all. Ammunition prejudice, of course! "Precision is too hard, Palma won't behave in my gun, Can't get Tackhole to act right, N. R. A. is too ding soft, Can't get Marksman, so easy in my neck o' the woods, and etc." We know that individual barrels have peculiarities, some of them mighty big ones. But when a man says he can't get Marksman, we know 'tis sheer prejudice, for, any ammunition concern would be tickled pink to see to the shooter's supply, and with the very freshest stock, too.

We are duly impressed by the vast stretch of Camp Perry from the Thousand-yards Butts to the 28th Inf. Area. Rows of long toilet buildings 150 yards apart before and behind Commercial Row! They put red-tiled roofs on 'em and call them latrines, then they lock the door and place "out-of-order" or

The Match with Canada and Cuba

By Lieut. J. Boa

[A most successful international match took place at Camp Perry, occasioned by the visits of rifle teams from the Dominion of Canada and the Republic of Cuba. The Canadians favored the United States with a return match as a result of the visit of the United States' team to Canada in 1924, on which occasion we were roundly trimmed by the Canadians. For the return match this year the Canadian team came to Camp Perry, and together with the Cubans, had a most successful international competition. The course fired over was identical with the Palma course, namely fifteen shots each at 800, 900, and 1000 yards.

In acquainting our readers with the details of this competition, we can do no better than reprint the article which appeared in the September issue of "The Canadian Marksman," written by Lieutenant J. Boa, adjutant of the Canadian team and a shooter well known to most United States Riflemen.—Editor's Note.]

ELEVEN men were selected by a special committee appointed by the D.C.R.A. Council to go to Camp Perry in order to complete a match with the rifle shots of the United States.

In 1924 the American Team came to Ottawa and shot with the British S.M.L.E. Rifle and Canadian Ammunition. In this competition held at Connaught Rifle Range the Canadians were successful and defeated the American Team with a score of 1578 to the American score of 1541, there being a margin of 39 points between the two teams. The late F. H. Morris, (G.C.) Grand Agg. Bisley, was the highest individual scorer in this competition, having a total of 213 points to his credit, the nearest competitor being 12 points behind.

The following was the personnel of the 1925 Team:

Lieut. Colonel R. J. Birdwhistle, Commandant.

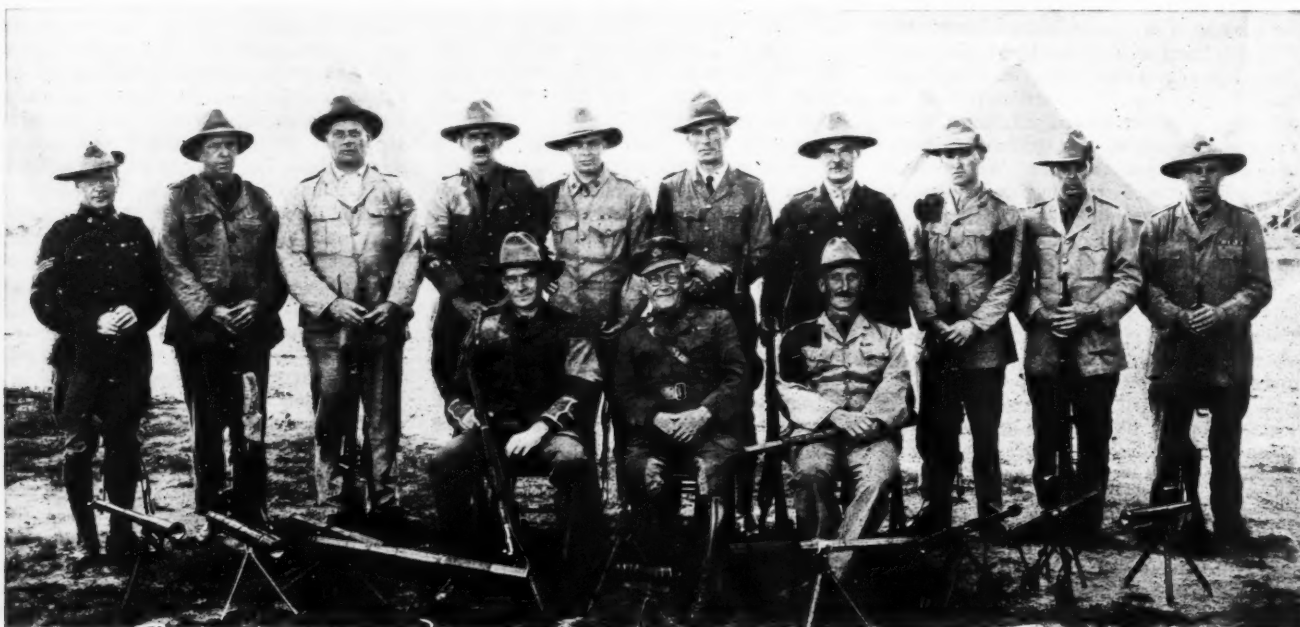

Sgt. J. Bennie, Coach.

The following were selected to act as shooting members:

Sgt. G. Emslie,
Sgt. A. Parnell,
Lieut. J. A. Steel,
Sgt. A. F. B. Wilson,
Lieut. D. T. Burke, (G.M.)
Sgt. J. Gray,
Sgt. Major W. A. Hawkins, (G.M.)
Sgt. J. Freeborn,
Sgt. J. Borland,
Lieut. E. T. D. Francis,
Lieut. J. Boa.

Lieut. Boa acted as Adjutant and looked after the minor details for the team.

The team assembled in Toronto on Saturday, August 29, and proceeded to Detroit where they were met by Major Simmons representing the N.R.A. of America. It had previously been arranged that we should have "Courtesy of the Port," and the Customs Officials had been instructed to this effect, so we had no trouble whatever with our baggage. Transportation was arranged for us between the Canadian National Ry. Station and the Union Station in Detroit and we proceeded at once to Toledo, Ohio, on the New York Central Express. We arrived in Toledo shortly before noon and found ourselves in a city where the thermometer registered 98 in the shade. We were obliged to wait in Toledo until about 3.30 in the afternoon before a special train left for Camp Perry, which is approximately 35 miles East of Toledo on Lake Erie. We arrived at the Camp just in time for supper and found that suitable quarters had been set aside for the entire team. The Camp Quartermaster supplied us with everything we needed in the way of camp equipment.

On Monday morning, the first thing was to draw our supply of National Match Star Gauged Springfield Service Rifles. They also supplied us with the necessary cleaning material, etc. The balance of the morning was spent in deciding which was the best way to use the American sling as none of the Canadians were accustomed to the American way of attaching same. It was almost universally agreed that the American method of attaching the sling would give the best results. After lunch we proceeded to the 200 yard firing point and found the zero of these rifles. They were found to vary slightly as far as the center line zero was concerned, but this was a matter for each individual man to remember. We then proceeded to the 800 yard range and each one fired a few shots. The same applied to 900 and 1,000 yards. Every member was quite satisfied with the shooting qualities of his rifle and very fair scores were made, although no official record was kept of this practice.

On Tuesday we carried out a further practice at the Long Ranges, but no official record was kept, although Sgt. Freeborn still continued with an unfinished run of 30 consecutive bull's-eyes at 800 yards, which he finally completed with a total of 79, having an inner on his tenth shoot in the team match. The first official practice was held on September 2 and several possibles were made at 800 yards with consistent shooting at 900 and 1,000 yards. The weather was very warm, and some of the members of our team were slightly indisposed owing to a boiling sun, and a change of food and water.

On Thursday we carried out a practice at 800, 900 and 1,000 yards, firing 10 shots each at 800 and 900 yards with 15 shots at 1,000 yards in the afternoon. During this practice there were seven possibles made, four at 800 yards and three at 900 yards. There were also three scores of 74 with 15 shots at 1,000 yards. The highest score for the day's shooting was made by Sgt. J. Borland, who scored 174 out of a possible 175, and Lieut. D. T. Burke was second in this practice with a score of 173.

On Friday we had a light practice preparatory to our big Team Shoot on Saturday, September 5. During this light practice, which was comprised of seven shots at 800, 900 and 1,000 yards, the top score was made by Sgt. J. Gray, who scored the best possible 104 out of 105, having possibles at 900 and 1,000 yards. Sgt. Parnell had a score of 103, as also Sgt. Emslie. We had an average of 102 points for 10 men in this practice, so it can be easily seen that we showed considerable improvement with the use of the Springfield rifle. In this practice there were eight possible scores registered. This completed the final practice, and then came the most difficult part of the whole competition (the selection of eight men to shoot on the team the following day). The exact personnel of the team was not definitely decided until Saturday morning when it was finally announced that the following members should comprise the Canadian International Team:

Lieut. D. T. Burke, (G.M.)
Sgt. G. Emslie,
Lieut. E. T. D. Francis,
Sgt. J. Freeborn,
Sgt. Major W. A. Hawkins, (G.M.)
Sgt. A. Parnell,
Sgt. J. Gray,
Lieut. J. Bo-

On Saturday morning the weather was not as bright as it had been during the early part of the week and the wind conditions were quite favorable at 800 yards and some excellent scores were made. The American Team had a total of 597 out of a possible 600 at this range, three men having scores of 74 and the other five scored a possible 75. The Canadians scored 592 at this range, which left us 10 points in lead of the Cubans, and 5 points behind the Americans, who were competing for the Palma Trophy. The following are the complete range scores of the three teams, and if these are carefully studied it will be noticed that the match was not won or lost until the last shots were fired at 1,000 yards.

Sgt. J. Bennie who was the Official Coach in 1924 had not lost any of his wind-doping ability this year and the team were absolutely unanimous in their praise for the wonderful coaching he did, being very ably assisted by Sgt. J. Borland. These two men were absolutely untiring in their efforts to make every shot count a five, and had the Canadians been able to hold their elevation absolutely perfect we would have won the match by at least 20 points, as the great majority of the points which we lost were due to elevation and not wind. At times the wind conditions were very tricky, and had it not been for the wonderful coaching we would have gone down to a greater defeat. Our team were beaten by a team of riflemen who have had a great deal of experience with the Springfield rifle, and we were all unanimous in our praise for their wonderful shooting. They were ably coached by Major K. K. V. Casey and assisted by Major Waller. The Cuban Team made a very brave attempt to win this match, and the score which they put on is by no means one to be spoken lightly of.

We wish to take this opportunity of pointing out the phenomenal shooting of all three teams competing in this competition, and draw your attention to the old world's record of 1720 points for the Palma Course made in 1912 by the American (Concluded on page 13)

By the National Rifle Association

On the seventeenth of July, 1861, three months after the firing on Fort Sumter, a hastily assembled Northern army under General McDowell left Washington with Richmond as a vague and distant objective. There were many units from many States, poorly organized and largely undisciplined. No tatterdemalions, these. Excepting the small proportion of regulars, their uniforms were as diverse and colorful as the various stripes of the rainbow. A Wisconsin regiment which unluckily dressed in gray, was fired upon by friends and foes alike during the succeeding battle. Both sides had many things to learn of the real essentials of warfare, and they learned them at bitter cost before they came to Appomattox.

How long it took the Northern armies to reach Richmond is a matter of history. One of the principal obstacles was an obnoxious line of Americans in butternut gray, who, as part of the tradition of the Southland, had learned to shoot with galling precision. If Stonewall Jackson and Lee and Grant could speak today, they would testify that a country can have no surer defence than its young manhood trained as marksmen.

OUR self-appointed strategist, Colonel William Mitchell, tells the world that our Navy is useless. He advocates placing all our trust in aviation under a separate air force. No doubt his modesty forbids any suggestion as to who the head of this air force should be. He would like to persuade

Our Useless Navy the people of this country, most of whom are reluctant to trust their individual safety to aviators and aircraft, to trust the nation's safety to aircraft and flyers. The Navy has long opposed this Mitchell idea and now comes in for a lot of hard knocks for its pains.

What is the record of the Navy in aviation? During the war, it furnished large numbers of coastal patrol aircraft for convoy duty and anti-submarine defense. Immediately after the war, it set busily about designing and building airplanes to go to sea with the fleet. In the brief interval since the war, the Navy's success, in spite of all statements to the contrary, is little short of astonishing. It is a big job to design and build airplanes suitable for use over the sea. Catapults had to be built for launching airplanes from battleships and cruisers. No other nation has these. Special types of airplanes particularly fitted for use at sea with the fleet, have had to be designed, built, tested, and supplied the fleet. Carriers had to be provided to take the aircraft with the fleet. The experimental "Langley" was built and tested, and the "Lexington" and "Saratoga" will join the fleet within a year. These two latter are among the largest ships in the world. Rigid airships had to be built and tested, and, in spite of the Shenandoah's disaster, the United States Navy's record with rigid airships excels even that of the boastful Germans. In other words, the Navy has deliberately set about making aviation a component part of the fleet and it has so far succeeded to this extent, that one hundred fourteen seagoing airplanes, superior to Naval aircraft possessed by any other country, flew from the decks of men-of-war and took part in the Hawaiian exercises this year. The Navy personnel is of the finest. Under the leadership of Admiral William A. Moffett, Naval Aviation has gone ahead by leaps and bounds.

Mitchell criticizes the Navy for obstructing the progress in aircraft development. This record of achievement refutes the charge. As a matter of fact, it would appear that the greatest obstruction in the development of aviation can be laid squarely at the door of Colonel Mitchell himself. His criticism has been extravagant and destructive and has made those responsible for aviation development spend most of their time refuting his charges instead of going ahead with development.

Unfortunately, the Navy does not pressagent its achievements. Nobody has written a "Halls of Montezuma" for the bluejacket. However, just as the Navy went from sail to steam, so is it now busily engaged in taking the air. Veterans of the World War remember that the Navy took them over and the Navy brought them back. If the Navy is allowed to build up its aviation in its own way as a component part of the fleet, this country will need no aviation for coast defense, the fleet with its aircraft, its carriers, and its tenders will push any possible enemy far out of reach of our shores. Colonel Mitchell calls the Navy useless. THE AMERICAN RIFLEMAN wonders if he has ever given himself a critical survey in a looking-glass.

THERE were no small bore shots at Perry, although the small bore range was fully occupied during most of the period of the matches. This surprising and paradoxical statement we base on the opinions of competent observers. And what it means is this, when boiled down to its fundamental idea. There is no longer such a sharp line of cleavage as we have thought of between the big bore enthusiasts, and the .22 caliber addicts. The men who attended this year shot both kinds, and the riflemen who came to shoot the small bore exclusively were conspicuous by their absence. Taken the other way round this theorem might not work, for there were doubtless many men present who shot the Service rifle only.

And this is as it should be. The basic reason for the National Rifle Association, and for all the work and expense involved in the National Matches is the training of men in the use of the military weapon. The .22 in this connection, is no more than an auxiliary. A mighty useful and pleasant auxiliary, we maintain. There is many a member who could not shoot at all if it were not for the fact that the small bore can be used where the big bore is unsafe. Much might be said also of the relative cost of ammunition. Perhaps the best instance of usefulness as a training arm is found in the story of a State team at the matches this year, whose officers thought seriously of sending some of its members home because they were frivolling away too much time on the small bore range. Yet in the National Team Match the culprits led the team in scores.

No, we cannot spare the .22 from the menu. We have no desire to do so. It is the gun for extreme youth, and old age, and many joyous occasions in between. It has proved itself invaluable as a training rifle. But it cannot outrank its big brother the .30 caliber, and it is obvious that the sound judgment of the majority of match riflemen bears out that statement.

"Did you pay for his dog?" I asked.

"Not on your life—but I paid his hospital bill. And when he got out he actually had the guts to want me to pay for that fancy gun I'd wrapped around the gate post! He's a fair sample of most of our uninvited guests!"

"I thought most hunters came and asked permission to hunt," I remarked.

"All the real sportsmen did—you used to."

Now I'll have to acknowledge that pleased me. I felt slightly puffed up. But it was pride before a fall.

"Didn't we give you any trouble?"

"Not much. You-all knew if you left my gates open, chopped posts out of my fence for your camp fires or left 'em burning, I'd know who did it. And if you let your dogs worry my sheep you knew I'd be peeved. Of course when you killed that burro that my boy rode to school—"

"What!" I gasped. "How did you know I—eh—was that your burro? I thought he was a stray—"

"Oh, that's all right," interrupted John. "A burro is no good for a kid to ride anyway—teaches him to fight his mount. It's too bad he found it dead, cause it shore hurt him. But I bought him a pony that he don't have to hammer along."

Right about here I didn't feel puffed up a bit, or pleased. I felt cheap. John is a nice fellow to visit with, but I suddenly decided I had other business. One part of that business was to figure out some way to fix it with that boy for killing his burro.

On the way home I drove down through an irrigated valley. "Posted" signs were everywhere. One man was working along a ditch near the road and I went over to get his idea of hunters. I must have approached him clumsily because he began to simmer.

"You live in town, don't you?" he asked. Poking a big finger at me, he went right on, "Now suppose I come along and throw a hatful of empty peanut shells on your lawn, you get peeved, don't you? If a neighbor's dog barks at the moon in the night you roll an' tumble, beef and bellyache till you have the whole house on the peck, don't you? If he jumps over the fence and digs up one of your rose bushes to bury a bone, you raise hell, don't you? If a couple stops on the sidewalk in front of your house an' leans against the fence so they may more successfully carry on the giggling process of 'love one another' you get sore, don't you? An' if some small boy shoots off his airgun, or bounces a little rock off your house roof from his rubber catapult, you wonder what in hell has become of the cop on that beat, don't you?"

I had to say, "Yes, sir," to every durned "Don't you?" and dodge his big finger that he poked at my ribs when he said it.

"Ye-as, you're damned right you do," he went on. "Yet, you think it perfectly all right to traipse around over my farm shooting at will and everything else in sight. Let your dogs dig for rabbits and leave great holes in my meadow and pile up heaps of dirt that I have to level down to get a mowing machine over. And you tramp down my growing hay so I have to put elevators on my sickle-bar to cut it. Ye-ah, just because you've got a hunting license you can do all of that, and tear down my fences, leave my gates open, fill my unpicked apples full of shot and otherwise make a damned nuisance of yourself, to boot!"

"Well," I growled, "you can't keep us from hunting along the public road!"

"Hell we can't!" he snapped. "Say, let me tell you something. The road belongs to the landowners on either side. The public does not own the road, by a hatful. They only have an easement, a right of way on which to pass and repass. That easement does not convey the right to loiter, camp, hold petting parties or discharge firearms on that strip."

"Even if you can hypnotize yourself into thinking you have all those rights, you will have to pass into a more profound state of hypnosis to think you have the right to discharge firearms promiscuously and in a way that the projectiles will pass over, fall upon or in any manner come in contact with the private property of others."

"And let me tell you something else, if you shoot a bird and it falls upon my land, it becomes a part and parcel of the property on which it lies. If you step your foot upon my land to pick up that bird, it is trespassing and I am lawfully empowered to put you off and use such force as is necessary to do it!" His finger was getting closer all the time.

"And further," he said, following me right up. "I have possession of that bird, it is on my property, inert. I can control its movements—it cannot now fly about at will. It is mine. So if you deprive me, even momentarily of possession of my property, it is theft, and if you have a gun in your hand it is theft with firearms!"

"Like hell!" I snapped. "In this country wi'd game belongs to the captor and—"

"Old stuff—old stuff. That may have applied when Washington crossed the Delaware, but now only on the public domain, and then just on certain days of the year known as 'open season.' . . . Your education has been sadly neglected. I would recommend that you take a course in a tri-weekly night school and specialize on property rights, easements and trespass!"

All at once I had a premonition, that if I did not leave there that horny-handed son of the soil would have a legal right to kill me in self-defense. He was a big duffer and had a long-handled shovel. So he could easily have planted me on the spot; thus I would have become part and parcel of his land and he could then feed me to his hogs when I got ripe if he wanted to.

I departed with dignity and dispatch. When I got home I went down and bought a nice riding saddle and had it sent out to John Endsley's boy to partly pay him for the burro I killed two years before.

And on thinking it over, I have come to the conclusion that we hunters have been a sorry bunch. As guests we have actually incurred the profound ill-will of our hosts. We have fractured all the laws of accepted hospitality and now we are trying to splint up the fracture by referring to our former hosts as tightwads, skinflints, joy-killers and worse, when we get to bellyaching good.

But, personally, I bellyache no more. My abdominal pains have passed. If anybody has a right to bellyache it's the farmers and ranchmen. And now if some good mixer will cope out a concoction with which we may relieve their pain and ill-will—let's have it.

The Match with Canada

Team when they defeated the Canadians by 8 points. This indicates that both the Canadian and American Teams established new records for this competition.

On Saturday evening the N.R.A. held a very nice dinner for all competing teams, together with the Officials of the N.R.A. Speeches were made by several officers present, including Major K. K. V. Casey, Lieut. Colonel Shaw, Major Waller and Lieut. Colonel R. J. Birdwhistle. A very agreeable surprise was given to all those present in the form of a pair of beautiful silver cuff-links presented with the best wishes of Mrs. K. K. V. Casey. Special mention should also be made of the parcel of delicious cake sent to the members of the Canadian Rifle Team by Mrs. Casey, which was enjoyed by every member of the team.

Special prizes were donated to Lieut. D. T. Burke as being the highest individual scorer on the Canadian team in the team competition and to Sgt. Maj. W. A. Hawkins as the highest Canadian scorer in the individual Palma. These special prizes were in the form of one of the National Match Star Gauged Springfield Rifles.

That Bullet-Proof Vest

By Thos. C. Harris

THERE is on the market a garment called a "Bullet-proof Vest" which is recommended as a certain protection for bank messengers, policemen, paymasters or others who may be subjected to the danger of an encounter with the bandits, hold-up men or gunmen wishing to obtain money at the point of a pistol. The vest is advertised as a sure protection against any sort of bullet fired from any sort of pistol, even when fired at very close range.

Having lately had the privilege of examining one of these vests and, in company with a friend, made an actual trial of the bullet-proof quality of the garment, I am of the opinion that the armor of the vest will resist the penetration of most of the pistols in common use, but not all of them. The garment is armored with plates of steel, probably specially treated, and in layers of three plates superimposed and overlapping.

The plates are about one and a half inch wide and each as thick as a playing card, incorporated in the garment, so as to be invisible to the eye. Externally there is nothing to indicate its peculiar structure, as the armor plates are within the fabric and covered with any desired material.

Being somewhat sceptical as to its bullet-proof quality against all sorts of pistols, I will briefly state the results of our trials. We found that two bullets, metal cased .45 caliber, service loads, indented the plates quite deeply but did not pass through. One of the bullets flattened even into a pancake, the other mushroomed and cracked the plate.

After this I tried my 9 mm. Luger, with surprising results. Three copies of a magazine, aggregating 441 pages of printed matter, and about three quarters of an inch in thickness, were tied together with a string, the test piece of the vest being on top. This was then stood on end and about an inch from a brick wall. The test shots were made at a distance of four feet.

The object of this arrangement was intended to simulate, as near as possible, the resistance of the body of a man wearing the vest.

The bullet struck the plate at right angles to its surface, passing through the steel and tore a hole about three inches in diameter through the magazines and then went to pieces against the brick wall. The metal jacket of the bullet was found sticking in the hole in the steel, the lead part of the bullet passing through as described. The effect as shown on the target and the brick wall would indicate that the bullet, after passing through the steel armor, still had enough force to kill a man or a horse. The scar on the brick wall showed plainly and the bullet was smashed into small bits.

After the Luger I tried the effect of a 7.65 mm. metal case bullet fired from a German "Ortgies" automatic pistol with a three and a half inch barrel. This little pistol gives me a penetration of four inches in dry pine, five inches in green wood, across the grain. The "Ortgies" bullet indented the armor fully as deep as the .45 but did not pass through.

In the literature of the makers, showing the tests of the vest while being worn, I feel sure that the wearer of the vest must have a supreme confidence in the garment or was willing to take a chance that I would not.

the whole thing along to the printer, while I will be paddling rubber boots up and down the blackboard line of the two last big matches at Perry for this year.

There is nothing to see along the firing lines except a lot of second-hand shoes. No use eyeing the hundred or so blackboards, for a string of near-world record "V's" may collapse with a wild-one while the observer is down at the other end of the line, and nothing is certain anyway till the faithful overworked statistical office is done with it all. Just like election. I've done what I can to make a list of names and figures readable, so sort over the rest of the returns for yourself, as space brings this tale to a close.

Next comes Fecker, who remained only long enough to get some of his new aluminum mounts out on the range, and left Howe (formerly of Griffin & Howe) a couple of days longer to get acquainted with the Fecker patronage.

Immediately above it comes the only outside illuminated booth, and which proclaims in large black letters, "Belding & Mull." They are quite puffed up over their enlargement. Two years ago Belding came to Perry with a few telescopic sights, and now B. & M. display 131 items of their own manufacture. Ness, in charge, is getting acquainted.

Next door, Sigmon Eisener, the uniform man, sits among his shirts and breeches condemning the hot weather which won't permit his selling as many mackinaws as were sold during the cold spell of 1924.

Colt follows and its popularity is divided between the revolvers and the well-known Fitzgerald, who slams your refractory sixgun with a lead hammer and makes her shoot where you hold 'em.

Next door, S. & W.'s beautiful gun display features their new straight pull .22 Free pistol, of which Col. Jones makes much, and at least does his darndest to have all the matches won with S. & W. guns.

Big, jovial, in-and-out Schneider and courteous always-in Foster run the Hoffman Arms booth, where they thrill you with superb workmanship and gun fit, and then spoil it all with a shock, when they say, "That gun sells for $300!"

Kohrs at the Remington-UMC booth is over-weighty with gunology and worries more and more day by day about the work that is piling up on him in his office back east.

Cambell, heavy man, and Riggs, who meets all comers, catch as catch can, are mighty pleasant fellows to meet at the Western booth. They are disposing of case after case of Super X, but, we bet, Riggs is worrying about the outcome of his Marksman ad.

DuPont is the place where six men sit around and Parker shows the interested visitor the different pressure-testing equipment's most salient features. Both Dupont and Hercules are selling powder in canisters to the boys in the tents, and passing out valuable books and pamphlets on the subject.

Treuer brought Peters here early and is still smoking the long stiff English pipe at that booth, while across the way, Winchester houses several. Some look wise, Virgil gets out on the range, while little Gussman does all the work when there is something to be done, and Henry is always ready to find it.

The AMERICAN RIFLEMAN is the trophy exhibit booth, which is a proof of the honesty of the National Rifleman, because they sure leave valuable trophies standing about.

No. 1 is the end of the row, where Col. Shaw holds sway in the D. C. M.'s chair, and Capt. Brooks, his assistant, just sits and talks and wonders if it will ever be necessary for him to know anything about the job, for the Civil Service women do the routine, while Nicholson cares for the bulletins and medals.

Maybe you'll wonder what this Row is all about, and I'll tell you it is merely the place where one corrects at first hand his distorted impressions of shooting goods and of shooting men. You are always meeting famous shooters or well-known writing men, or can examine some piece of equipment you have wanted to see for a long time. The greatest bit of color is the presence of Chauncey Thomas of the AMERICAN RIFLEMAN, representing the N. R. A. Press. We had heard some mighty misleading remarks concerning C. T., but after spending many hours with him in the booth and at the counter of the Short Order Barbecue Restaurant, we find him a wise old amiable chap and a good old scout, crammed full of gun, Indian, and Rocky Mountain lore and hosts of other things. We have met here half-a-dozen regular contributors to the AMERICAN RIFLEMAN, and have gained a more accurate impression of the writing game in two weeks here than in two years elsewhere.

We are writing this in our booth with the guns of the National Individual Match ringing in our ears, and just deplore the fact that we have been too busy to fire a shot. Think of that, from a shooting lover! Found out what the cinder sidewalk on Com. Row was for, when we had to buy two new half-soles at Port Clinton. Now time to can this stuff and open up for business, but we want to make one last kick. All in all, we have only one complaint to make about Camp Perry, and that is they should never, never, have permitted Teter of the Pittsburgh Club to come here while "Colt" Fitzgerald remains on the grounds. The two high-hatted big-boys are a couple of peas. The way I work it is to ask the one I encounter uncertainly, if he can take the marcel out of my sixgun barrel, because Fitz is the only boy here who removes the permanent kink. If he says "No," then I know it is Teter.

The International Matches

Standing at the corner of the Clubhouse, the visitor looks down on five other little mountain villages spread out on the landscape, which looks from this height like a map. These little towns practically appear to merge into each other, and in fact they are only a mile or so apart, but each one has its own clubhouse and target range! Compare that with America. There at Vogelensegg we looked down at one time on more target ranges than there are in the average American state.

Vogelensegg itself is a winter sport resort. There was a typical Swiss mountain hotel, or "Gasthaus," near the range, and there we habitually got lunch. Above the targets there was a clearing in the woods for ski-jumping, an indication of the winter activities.

When we actually started practice shooting, we got a startling example of the intense interest that every one in Switzerland takes in shooting. The gallery that we had was almost unbelievable. The average man, woman, and child in Switzerland is as much interested in shooting as the average American is in baseball. This International Shoot is to them a World Series. Stokes, Fisher, names like that, mean as much to the average Swiss as Walter Johnson or Ty Cobb would to the average American.

The news that the Weltmeister (World Champion) Americans with the Weltmeister Fisher, were to practice at Vogelensegg spread like wildfire, and people came from all directions to see.

Women and children shared the enthusiasm of the men. In fact, one of the most impressive things about the whole business was the way that the very children followed all the scores. There were several little fellows only nine or ten years old who were to be seen every day noting down the value of each shot as it was marked. If the team captain should have lost his record of the shooting, he could have replaced it accurately by calling on any of these boys.

This year was the regular time for the holding of the Cantonal Shooting Matches of the Canton of St. Gall, and the arrangements were planned to work in the International Matches as a finale to the Cantonal Matches.

The opening of the Cantonal Matches was another eye-opener as to the tremendous popularity of the rifle-shooting in Switzerland. The inauguration of the matches occurred on August 1, the anniversary of the formation of the Swiss Confederation. A feature of the day was a remarkably organized parade, or pageant with groups showing the arms and uniforms of the Swiss for hundreds of years back. After the parade, there was a mass-meeting in the Cathedral square, with speeches by various prominent men.

One of the most enjoyable features of the mass-meeting was a male chorus of two hundred and thirty voices, singing patriotic songs, without instrumental accompaniment.

At night, in the large mess hall at the range there was an opening banquet, more speeches, then a really remarkable entertainment on a stage at one end of the hall. There were gymnastic exhibitions, singing, trick bicycle-riding such as none of us had ever seen equalled in any state in the States; a pastoral scene illustrating typical village life in one of the mountain cantons, with native costumes, yodeling, folk dances, etc. For this scene real live cows with musical Swiss cowbells were driven up the aisle through the audience to the stage. Later there was a series of tableaux illustrating celebrated battles or incidents in Swiss history. In each case the center of the stage opened like a picture frame with the tableau in living figures in armor, with spears, flags, cannons and what-not. For each tableau there were two smaller frames, one at each end of the stage, with living statuary, representing a group appropriate to the subject of the main picture in the middle. And so on, until midnight and after, with a performance far ahead of the best vaudeville in the States. And a similar program, though less elaborate, was put on each evening of the matches.

Consider the fact that this was only a cantonal match, not a national one; that the canton in Switzerland is about the size of the average county in the eastern U. S., and that nearly 8,000 Swiss shooters attended these matches, firing each day an average of 35,000 shots, for which each man has to buy his own ammunition, and you have one index of the popularity of shooting in Switzerland. Another index is the fact that on an auto-ride one Sunday morning, I counted twenty-one rifle ranges in operation. Another index is the fact that in every Swiss house where we were entertained, there was a cabinet full of trophies, such as cups, mugs, crowns, etc., and the regular accessory in such a cabinet is a stack of sliding drawers or trays to hold the medals.

Even at this early date, the handwriting on the wall says plainly that we are going to know we have been in a fight when this thing is over.

St. Gall, August 3, 1925.

"The Dewar"

At the time of going to press we learn that the United States has won the International Small Bore Team Match for the Dewar Trophy with the record-breaking score of 7791. The British team fired their official scores on Sunday, the 20th, and were exceedingly unfortunate in striking the most adverse weather conditions, being compelled to fire in a pouring rain with gusty winds. At that they equalled their last year's score of 7753.

Owing to the lack of information on individual scores of the British team and further particulars, we will not give a detailed account of the firing of the Dewar in this issue but in our October 15 number we hope to present a most complete and authentic account of the shooting of both the United States and the British team. However the scores of the American competitors are given in detail on page 35.

The Howe-Whelen Rear Sight

downward about a sixteenth of an inch. The length of this pin may be adjusted by means of a set screw, so that it bears firmly on right side of tang. Just opposite, on left side of sight, is a steel plunger projecting downward about one-eighth inch, and held in its downward position by a stiff coil spring. This plunger rides the left side of tang and when bolt is closed is forced part way in—the spring tension holding the entire sight as rigid as if it were a part of the receiver.

By varying the length of the righthand pin, the aperture may be thrown a trifle to right or left to zero the rifle laterally—this movement being ample to bring the mark on aperture slide into line with one of the marks on windage scale, doing away with the necessity of an adjustable windage scale, and eliminating two tiny screws.

For the benefit of those who are particular about drift, this same adjustment of the tang pin affords a means of tilting the sight so that it will correspond with the drift slide on the service sight—provided you think the drift shown thereon is correct. If you must have some allowance for drift, the Howe-Whelen should, of course, be mounted before the service sight is removed.

To me that safety, located on right side of sleeve, and working forward and back, like the old-fashioned hammer, is by far the biggest improvement of all, and alone worth the price of the sight. When this safety is pushed forward it cams the cocking piece slightly more to the rear and locks it to stay locked; at the same time a plunger in the sight sleeve moves forward and locks the bolt. A quick backward jab with the thumb unlocks the action and makes the arm "ready." The safety is practically noiseless in operation, and if held and worked slowly, is absolutely noiseless, making it far preferable on a rifle that will be used for hunting to the old type of safety.

"When all's said and done," as C. T. would remark, the Howe-Whelen sight is not only an improvement in Springfield sighting equipment, but is also, in my humble opinion, a worthwhile improvement on the mechanism of the rifle itself.

I should like to see the Hoffman folks get out a "dope-sheet" for this sight, giving elevation and windage correction tables worked out for the service load with 170 grain boat-tail bullet—the Lyman tables now available being based on the old 150 grain load, and therefore obsolete. I should like it also if in the course of time they could reduce manufacturing costs so as to effect a substantial reduction in the selling price of the sight, making it available to a greater number of shooters who may feel they cannot afford it at its present price. Still—I don't know. I've got mine now—and I haven't forgotten how mad I was the last time I bought a flivver, and Henry cut the price fifty dollars two days later.

Remington Palma Popular at Perry

As in previous years, Remington Palma .22 Long Rifle Lesmok cartridges were used extensively by the small-bore shooters at Camp Perry this year and naturally quite a few matches were won by shooters who shot Palma ammunition. The matches won follow:

Two Man Team Match (Hercules Trophy)

Won by J. H. Robertson - Score 587
R. H. McGarity

Small Bore Wimbledon Match (Winch. Tro.)

Won by Fred Johansen - Score 99 - 12 V's

50 Yard Any Sight Match

Ten of the twenty-five members who made the Dewar International Team shot Remington Palma ammunition.

The small-bore season of 1925 has produced splendid shooting; much of this has been made possible by the remarkable shooting qualities of the .22 Long Rifle cartridge and in this the PALMA cartridge has taken a prominent part.

Neary Wins Metropolitan Small Bore Outdoor Championship

The Small Bore Outdoor Championship of the Metropolitan Rifle League held at the Montclair, N. J., Rifle Club Range, Sunday, September 27, brought together a representative gathering of leading small bore shooters of the Metropolitan District and nearby states, including Connecticut and Pennsylvania. The course consisted of ten shots at 50, 100, 150, 175, and 200 yards with preliminary sighting at 50 yards but none during the match at any stages.

As a result of the day's shooting, C. S. Neary of the Remington Rifle Team, Bridgeport, Conn., was proclaimed the Metropolitan Outdoor Champion for 1925 with the record score of 349 out of the possible 350 across the range as represented by the following:

Name	Yards					Total
	50	100	150	175	200
C. S. Neary	100	100	50	50	49	349

Mr. Neary's equipment consisted of a Remington-Martini rifle and Remington Palma .22 Long Rifle Lesmok cartridges. This is another excellent performance with Remington Palma Ammunition and indicates the faith leading marksmen have in this remarkable cartridge.

Free Shooting Information

Captain Askins has just written a new book about Super-X that we'll be glad to send you on request. Is there anything you want to know about your guns or ammunition? Let our technical men answer your questions.

Do you know about the many big developments which have made WESTERN the choice of the world's crack shots? Super-X for long range; Xpert for quality and low price in a smokeless shell; the Lubaloy bullet which prevents metal fouling in high-power rifles; the Open-Point Expanding bullets for deadly killing power; the Marksman L. R. .22 for amazing accuracy in small-bore shooting.

Literature telling all about them is yours for the asking. Always glad to hear from you.

FLASHES OF FEATHERED LIGHTNING

In the brush ahead your setter swerves and freezes into a point. . . . Man, what a picture! . . . "Steady, boy!—H-o-l-d! now" . . . and as you cautiously close in, there's a sudden roar of drumming wings—flashes of feathered lightning—two quick reports . . . twice the good dog pauses at your feet, bird in mouth and tail beating in triumph.

Quail shooters claim there's no better sport in all the world and no better shell than Xpert for all-round shooting. This newest WESTERN development in shotgun ammunition is a smokeless shell that has set a new standard of low-priced excellence.

Then there is the famous long-range Super-X load—as deadly on ducks, geese and turkeys as Xpert is on smaller game. Super-X, with its concentrated shot string and close patterns, adds 15 to 20 yards to the effective range of your gun. You ought to try it next time you need a heavy load, either 12, 16, 20 gauge, or .410.

The WESTERN Field shell, third member of this famous family, has been the choice of the world's best shots for more than twenty years. These three shells and such notable improvements in rifle and revolver ammunition as Lubaloy non-fouling bullets, the High-Velocity .30-.30, the remarkably accurate Marksman L. R. .22, and others, have made the WESTERN name mean leadership in ammunition improvement. WESTERN has won the title, "World's Champion Ammunition." It will improve your shooting also.

*The Gunowner's ManualAmateur Gunsmithing

BY

Major Townsend Whelen

Essential to the man desiring an individual weapon; valuable to every owner of a rifle, pistol or shotgun, and ready for immediate delivery.

A comprehensive boil-down of gunsmithing methods adaptable to the home shop and tool kit.

Since its appearance as a serial in The American Rifleman, "Amateur Gunsmithing" has been materially enlarged and elaborated. There are additional chapters, including discussions on repairs to revolvers, pistols and shotguns. An exhaustive appendix has been added containing special information upon methods of dismounting and assembling the mechanisms of the better known hunting and military arms, the removal of metal fouling, the making of sulphur casts and tables of barrel dimensions which will be found invaluable to the amateur gunsmith.

The volume is substantially but attractively bound in buckram, is adapted to ready and convenient reference, and contains 175 pages of real dope from a man who knows his stuff.

The World's Daintiest Fastest-Handling He-Gun

Hunters, you know that regular sporting Springfield rifles are too heavy and clumsy in stock and barrel for most successful woods use. They swing so slow they make you fail in many snap shots. They are burdensome to carry because of weight and wrong balance.

BUT the Springfield rifle with light stock and special barrel makes one of the fastest-handling and easiest carried sporting rifles known.

The wonderful accuracy and superb power of the .30-1906 cartridge is not impaired, when construction of the light gun is correct.

We make these short, light rifles, with barrels short and slim or short and thick, with straight taper or otherwise as desired. Let us make you a gun to suit your special fancies and woods conditions. Remember, Niedner fine barrels and stocks are reasonably priced.

EVIDENCE

In 1912 I discarded a very accurate Springfield sporting rifle, because it was too slow, heavy and clumsy in the woods. It took twelve years' time and five other rifles to swing me back to the Springfield again, but I am back, most emphatically. I have a Springfield with a hand made stock and a special 20-inch barrel. It is what I have dreamed of for years. The cut-down military rifle is always too weighty, but this little arm of mine is the world's daintiest, fastest-handling he-gun, without any question.

"American Rifles for the American Sportsman"

Target and Sporting Rifles by Griffin & Howe

The purchase of a handmade rifle of "gilt edge" accuracy and lasting beauty is an economical investment. The painstaking workmanship and superior technical skill in design and construction shown in a "Griffin and Howe" rifle, necessitates a high initial cost: its accuracy, durability and beauty mean lasting satisfaction and a permanent cure for the too common search for an ideal in low-priced, standardized weapons and the constant changes, sales and trades, which, in the end, cost much more than a complete battery of Griffin and Howe rifles.

For the hunter's rifle we unhesitatingly recommend a remodeled Springfield, Winchester or Mauser for the .30 Government cartridge with its wide assortment of loads. We consider it the one best rifle for the American sportsman. For a complete battery we advise:

- 1 250-3000 Mauser
- 1 .30 Govn. Springfield, Mauser, or Winchester M. 54
- 1 35 Griffin and Howe Magnum.

We are also prepared to furnish rifles in .25 H. P. Special, 7 mm. 300 Magnum (H.&H. Super 30), 35 Whelen, .400 Whelen, and .400 G. & H. Magnum.

For target work we can furnish Springfields and Mausers of any weight or design, and B.S.A., Winchester, or Springfield small bore rifles with specially designed stocks and improved trigger pulls. We specialize in fitting telescopic sights.

We keep in stock a well chosen line of accessories—including many articles of our own design. We have selected the best in equipment for the wilderness hunter, camper and marksman! When we build your rifle, let us furnish your complete outfit.

The rear sight is set close to the eye, giving a long sight base. This decreases possible variation to a minimum. It also enables the shooter to all but ignore the rear sight when aiming and concentrate his attention on holding the front sight on the target. This relieves eye strain, and permits of greater accuracy. Front sights are designed to stand out sharply against the target in any light.

The Kentucky Rifle

May 14, 1925.

My dear Captain Dillin:

I have been away from home so much that this is my first chance to thank you for your magnificent work on "The Kentucky Rifle" and to compliment you on its appearance.

Years ago, when I was digging up historical material in relation to the American backwoods rifle, I did not dream that sometime such a work as this would appear. And no one can appreciate better than I the immense labor—the loving labor—that you have spent on it.

I regret that the publishers could not incorporate more of your text and illustrations; but, as it is, this book marks an epoch in the literature of firearms.

I have not yet had time to read it through; but the plates alone are astonishingly rich in authentic material.

This is the choicest treasure among all the books I have accumulated in a lifetime given largely to the study of American frontier history and to the literature of the out-of-doors. And I prize especially your own portrait and the dedication, so aptly worded, to the old firearm itself.

Long may you live, Captain Dillin, to enjoy the honor of your achievement and the love of your fellow riflemen!

Sincerely,

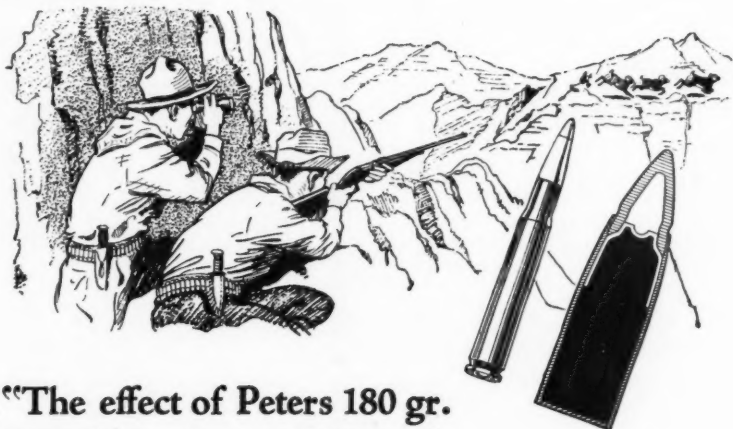

HORACE KEPHART.

"The effect of Peters 180 gr. Cartridge at over 1000 yards — was unbelievable!"

READ a prominent gun and ammunition expert's report of the startling effectiveness of Peters .30-06-180-gr. Govt. Cartridge with the Protected Point Expanding Bullet (pat'd.) at long range on Rocky Mountain goat—tough game at even normal ranges.

Due to its construction, this bullet expands on impact and continues its course, combining extreme penetration with uniform expansion resulting in maximum shocking power. This Big Game bullet is supplied in .30-06 Govt.-150 and 180 gr.; .30-40 Krag-150 and 180 gr.; .300 Savage and .250-3000 Savage.

There is a superior Peters cartridge for every class of shooting. Peters famous "steel where steel belongs" shot shells include the "High Velocity," a shell that is the talk of shooters wherever used. Its load of progressive burning powder gives in 12 ga. a velocity equivalent to $3\frac{3}{4}$ drs. of bulk smokeless powder. It is superior in speed, range, and game-getting patterns to anything ever developed.

PETERS
AMMUNITION

"We were after pictures and trophies of Rocky Mountain goat. My guide asked if I could hit one. I said 'No.' But the temptation was too great. I lined up the sights. The largest billy, running, appeared about half the size of the front sight of my Springfield! I pulled. The fourth shot, aimed fully six feet above the quarry, struck in the kidneys, ranging forward through stomach and lungs.

"We got to the billy a couple of hours later, and traced the bullet carefully, locating most of the jacket fragments. Distance to timber line was over one thousand long strides down the shale. We shot fully three hundred yards back in the timber. The range was over one thousand yards, certainly too far to fire at game. However, the destruction by this bullet at that range was unbelievable."

The New Hoffman Bolt-Sleeve Sight for Mauser

Brings Aperture 2 3/8 inches nearer to your eye

HERE'S the Bolt-Sleeve Sight we promised to owners of Mauser rifles—one that will give them the same edge in shooting that our Howe-Whelen Sight has for Springfield owners. The chief advantage of this sight is that it brings the aperture 2 3/8 inches nearer the eye, the line of sight being much lower than on any other peep sight. It is practically the same as our immensely popular bolt-sleeve sight for Springfield, the elevation being in minutes of angle and windage in quarter points. Fits any Mauser 1903 or 1908. Another Record Broken

It seems that at every small-bore shoot of importance at least one world's record is established with US .22 N.R.A. long-rifle cartridges. It was so at the Olympics in France, at the National matches in Ohio last year, at Sea Girt this summer, and again at Camp Perry a few weeks ago.

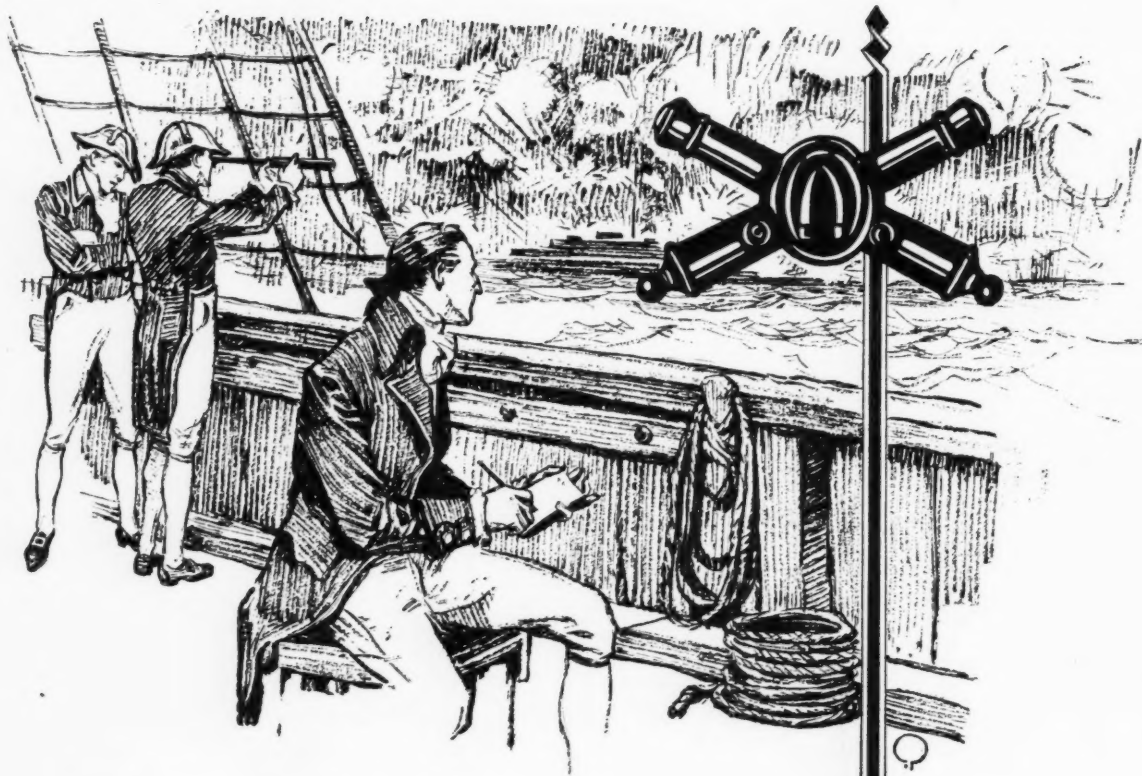

The record broken with US N.R.A.'s at Camp Perry this year was that for the National Individual Small-Bore Championship at 50, 100 and 200 yards. The new record was made by T. J. Imler, of the Arizona National Guard, who shot the high score of 247 x 250. Such a performance is not only a tribute to the "holding" of Mr. Imler but to the accuracy of US .22 N.R.A.'s as well.

The National Individual Championship was but one of many matches in which these straight-shooting .22's featured. Forty-nine per cent of all prize winners in the small-bore rifle matches used .22 N.R.A.'s. Furthermore, seventy-five per cent of all prize winners in the pistol and revolver matches where commercial ammunition was used shot cartridges of US make.

"The Star Spangled Banner"

The British fleet lay grim and forbidding off Baltimore harbor.

On the deck of the Frigate "Surprise" paced Francis Scott Key, a civilian sent by the Americans under flag of truce, and held temporary prisoner until the attack on the city should succeed or fail.

All night he had watched with strained eyes the flash of guns from Fort McHenry; and the crimson burst from signal rockets, which told him that the cannoneers were making a gallant defense.

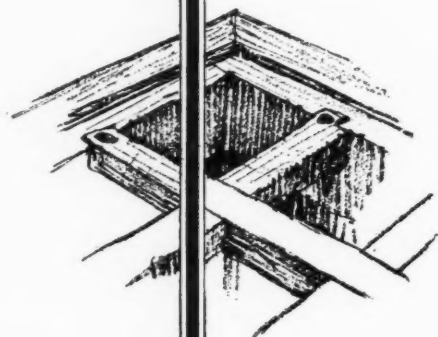

Every shot that splintered the deck at his feet, or tore its way through the rigging above his head, sent a thrill of pride through his tense body.

When in the first pale light of dawn he saw that the flag still waved proudly over the ramparts, Key whipped pencil and paper from his pocket and wrote the words of that song which is at once a prayer of thankfulness for Victory and a Nation's Anthem.

In 1814 the efficient bravery of our Coast Artillery was, as it is today, a bulwark against enemy attacks from the sea.
